POSTOFFICE BUSINESS LAST YEAR
BREAKS ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS

Postmaster Says 1924 Will Not Be So Good Due to Loss of Telephone Company's Business—Needed
$3500 More Gross to Win Pay Raise and More Help

The local postoffice did more business during the year 1923 than ever before in its history, despite the fact that 1923 was not a good business year. The total revenue of the office was within $2500 of the amount necessary to advance it into the $300,000-$400,000 class.

The rating of postoffices is decided upon by the amount of revenue received in a year. The local office is at the present time in the $250,000-$300,000 class. If the revenue for 1923 had been $3500 more the supervisory officials of the office would have been granted an increase in pay and the office would have been assigned additional carriers and clerks.

It is doubtful, according to Postmaster DeBise, if last year's record will be equalled within the next few years as the removal of the office of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company from this city means a loss of revenue of approximately $15,000 a year.

From the standpoint of efficiency 1923 was also a record breaking year, according to the postmaster. The main office was enlarged by the addition of an extra floor over the main section, permitting the removal of carriers' distributing desks from the main floor and adding greatly to the space used for first class and parcel post matter.

The opening of the Centralville station also assisted greatly in relieving congestion at the main station as all carriers for Centralville and Dracut have their headquarters there. At the present time this station is not running on a paying basis in so far as revenue is concerned but it is expected that the business will gradually increase as residents of that section get in the habit of using their own station instead of purchasing stamps at the main postoffice.

Senate Eulogies of Former President

Declares Wilson Was Man
of Remarkable Ability and
Sound Character

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Congress put aside today the bitter partisan debate which has held forth there in recent days, out of respect for the memory of Woodrow Wilson.

Both houses met at noon as usual, but it was only so that their leaders, of all shades of political opinion, might pay tribute to the fallen chief, and make resolutions commensurate with his services to the nation.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the republican leader and one of Mr. Wilson's most uncompromising political foes, joined with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, in the senate eulogies of the former president.

"In sympathy and sorrow, and with every mark of homage," said Senator Lodge, "we stand with bowed heads in solemn recognition of this event, at once sad and momentous, which has thus come upon us in the wisdom of the overruling Providence that guides the destinies of mankind."

The republican leader said republican senators had heard with profound sorrow the announcement of Mr. Wilson's death.

"In common with all the people of this country," he said, "we have felt a very deep sympathy for the sufferings of President Wilson during his long illness, which he has borne with calmness and with so much fortitude."

"Mr. Wilson was a man of remarkable ability, and of strong character."

In New Home Today
Marks Bldg., 40 Central St.

While the carpenters and decorators were putting the final touches yesterday on the new Gilday quarters, busy hands were unpacking and arranging fastidiously the newly arrived New York Spring fashions, fresh and crisp from their tissue wrappings. By this morning everything was in readiness, and the collections of lovely dresses were winning favorable comment and outspoken admiration. Many selections were made by enthusiastic patrons.

The new Gilday quarters are somewhat smaller than occupied in the old store, but this upstairs Shop is not only a more convenient location, but also allows overhead costs to be reduced materially. The attractive price tags on the garments must surely appeal and convince patrons that all sales will be made on very close margins.

The easy stairway and interior of the new premises are arranged so as to conduct the business efficiently with every comfort and convenience, and a pleasant and quiet atmosphere. The decorations are very attractive, yet simple and free from extravagance. The general color scheme of ivory and rose harmonizes throughout, and proves most pleasing to the eye.

This (ten years young) firm should prosper and continue to merit the continued goodwill of its many loyal patrons.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

Tewksbury Voters Want
Lower Taxes—Extra Money for Schools Refused

Economy was the watchword at the gathering of more than 350 Tewksbury taxpayers, who met at 9 o'clock this morning in the town hall, Tewksbury Centre, to discuss many important community affairs, also to elect officers for the coming year and appropriate moneys for carrying on the town's varied business.

With a rising tax rate last year that led to much later discussion and criticism, the taxpayers gathered today appeared to be prepared for the most part to go slow on approving money appropriation in 1924 for anything except what is absolutely needed to carry on the town's regular business affairs.

The voters resolved early in the day to play the economy system to the limit. A bid for a new tractor to help the winter snow-fighting brigades was turned down after a long but lively debate. The sum of between $1600 and $5000 had been asked for.

Articles calling for the appropriation of $115,000 for a new town school building and for $12,000 for building

PLAN ANOTHER "HOME BEAUTIFUL" SHOW

Plans for another "Home Beautiful" exhibition this year at the Memorial Auditorium will be discussed at a meeting of the Lowell Contractors' association to be held tomorrow evening in the Donovan building.

Tentative plans for such a show, including the erection of a house upon the stage, which was the feature of last year's exhibition, already have been advanced and at tomorrow night's meeting it is expected something definite will materialize and the approximate dates of the exhibition fixed.

Thousands of persons attended last year's exhibition and the contractors feel interest is such as to warrant an even more elaborate show this year.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY AT OPERA HOUSE TODAY

The annual play of high school pupils is being presented this afternoon and evening at the Lowell opera house, the stock company omitting its bill for one day in order to permit the presentation.

"The Morning," as the high school play is called, played to a well filled house this afternoon and an even greater attendance is expected for tonight's performance which starts sharply at 8.15.

WASHING, Feb. 4.—Congress today stilled the turmoil over the leasing of the naval oil reserves to pay its tribute to Woodrow Wilson.

The senate oil investigating commission, whose authority to question him further under the resolution authorizing the inquiry, was challenged Saturday by Albert H. Fall, secretary of the interior at the time the oil leases were arranged, will not meet until tomorrow. It had decided to ask the senate for readoption of the resolution today but this plan necessarily was changed and leaders of the inquiry announced that the session called for tomorrow would be a brief one, adjourning to await action on its request for renewal of its authority.

WILLIAM D. REGAN, attorney for the men of the fire department, appeared before the budget and audit commission at 2 o'clock this afternoon to present reasons why a wage increase of $1 a day is requested this year.

Already the firemen have made a request to Mayor John J. Donovan and in addition have filed a petition containing upwards of 600 names of taxpayers who favor such an increase.

The appearance of Attorney Regan before the budget commission is an effort to show why $1 a day more is justifiable and in the hope that the commission will make such a recommendation when it submits its budget to the mayor.

City Engineer Stephen Kearney also will appear before the commission this afternoon in connection with estimates submitted by the engineering division.

Chairman Tyler A. Stevens of the commission said today he expects his board will have completed its work on the estimates of all departments except the school department some time this week and will then turn over the budget to the mayor. The mayor probably will take at least a week making up his figures, which would mean that the council will not get the budget until the week of the 17th, at the earliest.

Former President Passed From Life While He Slept in Prayerful Quiet of Sunday Morning

WOODROW WILSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press) Woodrow Wilson has found in eternity a haven from the storms and sorrows of a troubled world. In the prayerful quiet of a Sunday morning, death folded him gently in its embrace and bore him to his Maker.

He passed from life while he slept, with those he loved best close about him. His broken body had weakened little by little until the last spark of his vitality went out. But his spirit was supported to the last by the indomitable courage of the old fighting days. In his last wakeful moments, he told his loved ones that he knew the end had come, and was ready.

Whether there will be a state funeral ceremony, or merely a private gathering of those nearest him to pay their last meed of devotion, is still to be decided. It depends almost entirely on the wishes of the widow, who has been an ever-present help in the long, weary months of his illness, and who was with him when he died.

FUNERAL SERVICES WILL BE HELD WEDNESDAY

No Great State Ceremony to Mark Obsequies of Distinguished Leader Who Passed Into Eternity
Yesterday—Friends and Former Associates Pall Bearers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press) Tentative plans for the funeral of former President Wilson, as announced today by Dr. Grayson, provide for a brief private service at the S street residence at 3 p. m., on Wednesday. This service will be followed by another at 3.30 o'clock at Bethlehem chapel, in the cathedral at Mount St. Albans, where the body will be placed in a vault until arrangements have been made as to a final resting place. It was decided not to hold a state funeral, as proposed by some, or to have the body lie in state at the capitol. The funeral services will be conducted both at the home and at the chapel by the Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, which Mr. Wilson attended; the Rev. Sylvester Beach of Princeton, N. J., who was Mr. Wilson's pastor there; and Bishop Freeman of Washington.

A large number of friends and former associates will be designated as active and honorary pallbearers. Among them are Bernard M. Baruch, Vance McCormick, Cleveland H. Dodge, Cyrus McCormick, some of the members of Mr. Wilson's war-time cabinet, and others, who were associated with him during his terms in the White House. The Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church which Mr. Wilson attended during his residence in Washington, probably will deliver the funeral sermon.

Walter F. McDermott of Wilder Street on Danger
List at Hospital—Daniel Guthrie Seriously Injured
—Driver of Car Arraigned on Drunkenness Charge

As a result of an automobile accident which occurred on Westford street early yesterday morning, Walter F. McDermott of 597 Wilder street is at St. John's hospital suffering from injuries that it is believed will prove fatal. His name is on the danger list. Daniel F. Guthrie of 452 Pine street is at the same hospital suffering from numerous injuries to his head. Harold M. Delong of Chelmsford Centre and Joseph Burkhshaw of 26 Marlborough street, the two other occupants of the machine, escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred at 6.26 o'clock yesterday morning on Westford street near Foster. Delong is the owner of the machine and was driving it at the time of the accident. He was booked at the police station following the smash-up, charged with driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

Delong was arraigned in district court this morning on charges of drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Through his attorney, Edward J. Tierney, a continuance was granted to February 18. Delong furnished $400 surety. Except for a slight cut over

CITY COUNCIL WILL ACT ON NOMINATIONS

POLICE OFFICER RISKED LIFE TO SAVE BOY

Some action will be taken by the city council tomorrow night on four nominations submitted by Mayor John J. Donovan, which although filed with the city clerk a week ago, have not formally been presented to the council. They are: Frederick F. Meloy, board of public services; Henry H. Harris, board of library trustees; William A. Arnold, superintendent of state aid, and Charles Riley, smoke inspector.

The mayor said today he will re-nominate George W. Enwright as city weigher, although his nomination may not go down for tomorrow night's meeting.

It is believed that all four of the above nominations will receive unanimous confirmation in the council as each either is a matter of re-election or filling a place now vacant because of a resignation. Mr. Harris, Mr. Arnold and Mr. Riley already are serving in positions of which they have been re-nominated and Mr. Meloy is named to take the place on the public service board made vacant through the resignation of George Bowers.

The city of Lowell's last reception to the Prince of Wales took about $11,125 out of the municipal treasury.

VENIZELOS AND CABINET RESIGN

"MADAME BUTTERFLY" TO BE PRESENTED HERE

Colin O'More, the brilliant young American tenor to appear in this season as a star in the de Luxe production of the opera, "Madame Butterfly," to be given here by Fortune Hall's famous San Carlo Grand Opera Company on Feb. 15 at the Auditorium, has traveled a long, hard road to success, a path that has been fraught with hardships and many bitter disappointments, beginning in a small western town, the son of a physician, he showed an early leaning toward a musical career by his fondness for the piano when still a little lad. At sixteen he was sent to the Cincinnati College of Music, to study this instrument, but before long his vocal gifts became apparent, and the last three years of the college were devoted almost entirely to the voice. At twenty-one he was graduated in both voice and piano. During this early period he also brought forth several compositions.

The opportunity to study with the great tenor, Jean de Reszke, now located here before him and during the next three years we find O'More in Paris studying opera and the anthology of French song with the celebrated master. As a direct result of this, O'More has been placed in the front rank as a singer of French chansons, his diction and phrasing being considered by such eminent authorities as Edmond Clement, Mme. Georgette LeBlanc and Dame Nellie Melba, as among the finest on the concert platform today.

Mr. O'More now left de Reszke and went to Italy to study the Italian language, and incidentally to make his operatic debut, as it afterwards turned out. A year passed, and then he went to London, where he gave his first recital and filled many engaged-ments in the homes of prominent people. Having always been of the lyric type and with a decided leaning for the songs of Ireland, Mr. O'More devoted much time and study to the music of Ireland, its history and folklore, cultivating the acquaintance of the foremost authorities and setting many of the better known lyrics to accompaniments of his own, such as the "Minstrel Boy," "Kathleen O'More" and "The Dear Little Shamrock."

It must be borne in mind that during all this time Mr. O'More was struggling with an adverse fate that seemed to pursue him everywhere, later and dispiriting were the disappointments that he met, and often it seemed as though success would never come. He is an artist, however, who realizes the endless possibilities of his chosen profession, and though it seemed at times as if it were impossible to make further progress, a will that would not be downed drove him on to the better days that were to come. For this reason he is a splendid example and inspiration for the aspiring musical student to follow.

Returning to America, O'More continued his vocal studies with the noted teacher, William V. Knecht. Mr. O'More gave his first American recital in Astor hall. In reviews of this concert by the late H. E. Krehbiel and Sylvester Rawlins, he was commended favorably with the great tenors, Cleofa and McCormack. Spurred on by this success, he followed with three recitals in Carnegie hall during the past season, all before packed houses, followed by concerts in many of the larger eastern cities. At the conclusion of the season he was engaged by Fortune Hall of the San Carlo opera, as stated above.

Seats are now on sale at Chalfoux's.

Thomas W. Gregory, attorney general in the Wilson cabinet, who was originally selected to serve as the democratic member of the special counsel, conferred with the president yesterday and handed him a letter explaining that in his telephone conversations with the White House prior to the announcement of his appointment, he had not understood he was accepting and Mr. Coolidge confirmed the inference he had drawn.

The former attorney general said he had not known, until he read Doherty's testimony, that his interests had paid part of the fee he received as counsel from the Island Oil Co., and that he had never had any connection, directly or indirectly, with the California oil magnate, and that if he had been aware of this, the matter of his appointment as one of the oil counsel for the government would have ended at once because "it would have disquali-

CLAIM OF POSTAL CLERKS FOR HIGHER WAGES

If only as a means for the preservation of the morale and esprit de corps of the postal department, a wage raise is justified in the opinion of Senator David I. Walsh, junior senator from Massachusetts. Speaking on the subject before the senate, Mr. Walsh pointed out that demoralization is now threatened. Continuing, he said: "Only a fine spirit of public service and the conviction that congress would soon remedy the present unduly low salaries have prevented a condition developing which would seriously cripple the postal service."

"As it is, the labor turnover in the clerical branch of this service is larger than in any other branch of the government."

Every postal clerk has in face all kinds of weather, heat, the consequences of being charged with an important trust, and endure the physical strain of carrying a heavy pack while traveling his route day after day, year in and year out. For all this the postal service pays a minimum of $26.92 and a maximum of $31.81 per week after three years. These salaries make it increasingly difficult to recruit capable postal employees. We cannot afford to let the postal service deteriorate, for delay, inaccuracy and

AMERICAN LEGION MEETING TONIGHT

Commander Colth Macdonald of Lowell Post, 87, of the American Legion, announced last night that in conjunction with the movement being made all over the country by veterans to secure adjusted compensation, a meeting of the legion in this city would be held tonight to discuss plans for securing the support of the general public in the fight against the big, diamond organizations that are fighting to prevent the passage of friendly legislation.

He declared that the American Legion is holding its own in the fight going on in Washington at the present time, in spite of the fact that many corporations in the country are requesting their employees to send in letters protesting the passage of the bill. A meeting of the executive committee will be held tonight at 7:30, followed by a regular meeting of the post at 8 o'clock, at which the question will be discussed.

carelessness in this service are ruinous. The very efficient postmaster of Boston, Mr. Roland M. Baker, recently made an investigation as to the cost of living for a postal employee with a small family, not over four persons. The result of that investigation shows that the monthly expenditures amounted to $208, while the maximum salary is $150 per month.

The Kelly bill, known as H.R. 4123, provides for revision to the following scale: First grade, $2000; second grade, $2200; third grade, $2400; first grade special clerk, $2500; second grade special clerk, $2600; substitute clerks, 80 cents an hour. There are a few of the reasons cited by the postal employees in support of their claims for more money.

1.—The postoffice employees are skilled workers rendering services vitally necessary to the public.

2.—Their pay, almost entirely, comes from postal service earnings and not from taxation.

3.—Postal service earnings are greatly curtailed because rates of postage, which are in reality postal labor costs, have remained stationary during a period when other costs have soared.

4.—The two-cent stamp of today buys more service (labor) for postal patrons than forty years ago. A unique record in these days of soaring labor costs.

5.—Postal employees are fully entitled to share in their greater productivity. To deny them this right is to insult the government as an employer.

6.—There is a larger labor turnover in the clerical branch of the postal service than any other branch of government employment, due largely to unattractive wage and working standards.

7.—The wage of the postoffice employee should insure him:

(a) Comfortable living quarters.
(b) Good, healthful food with an occasional chance to enjoy delicacies.
(c) Enough good clothing for most purposes.
(d) The chance for the wife to buy enough mechanical and physical aid to relieve household work of much of its drudgery.
(e) The means to buy books, go to the theatre, and give the children adequate education.
(f) At least a limited amount of recreation.
(g) Some insurance and a little fund of savings.
(h) Low wages are more costly than high wages. A high standard of postal pay means a more dependable postal service, the value of which cannot be calculated. Higher postal pay, therefore, is a sound investment for the American people.

CATHOLIC CHURCH NEWS

Blessing of Throats Yesterday in Observance of Feast of St. Blase

The blessing of throats in observance of the Feast of St. Blase took place in the Catholic churches of the city yesterday. This feast annually follows Candlemas day, the throats of the faithful being blessed with candles dedicated the previous day.

In St. Patrick's church yesterday, the blessing of throats took place after each mass. It was announced that the university extension course in oral English and parliamentary law will begin tomorrow evening, the candidates to meet in the hall of St. Patrick's school at 8 o'clock. The class will be in charge of Mrs. Elizabeth L. McNamara of Cambridge who is working under the direction of the state department of education.

Next Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock holy hour service will be held.

The Holy Rosary sodality of the Immaculate Conception church received communion at the 8 o'clock mass yesterday. The high mass at 11 o'clock was celebrated by Rev. John Duffy, O.M.I., while the sermon was delivered by Rev. William A. Robbins, O.M.I.

Very Rev. Daniel J. Keleher, Ph.D., was the celebrant of the 7:30 o'clock mass in St. Peter's church yesterday, at which members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. The blessing of throats took place at 8 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

The regular meeting of the Married Ladies' sodality will be held Wednesday evening of this week at 7:30 o'clock.

The Holy Rosary sodality of the church of the Sacred Heart received communion in that church at the 7:30 o'clock mass yesterday. The newly-organized church choir sang impressively at the high mass.

There will be a special meeting of the Holy Rosary sodality Wednesday evening. A social will be held under the auspices of this sodality at a date to be announced later.

The musical show of the Sacred Heart social club will be held on Feb. 28 in the school hall.

The new St. Michael's school in Sixth Street was open to public inspection yesterday afternoon and was visited by many admiring parishioners.

St. Michael's Charity school, Rev. Jas. P. Lynch, spiritual director, will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. Confessions for the public school girls will be held next Saturday afternoon, beginning at 8 o'clock. They will receive communion at the 8 o'clock mass next Sunday.

At the high mass yesterday, Rev. Augustin G. Madden delivered a forceful sermon on "The Power of God." The St. Blase blessing was given yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

The blessing of St. Blase was administered in St. Margaret's church at 7 o'clock last night. Disorderly order of services was observed in the morning. The masses being celebrated by Rev. William P. Brennan, Rev. Andrew P. O'Brien and the pastor, Rev. Charles F. Galligan.

The pastor, Rev. John J. Powers, celebrated the 7 and 8 o'clock masses in St. Columba's. The 10 and 11 o'clock masses were celebrated by Rev. Cornelius J. O'Brien. The blessing of throats took place at 2:30 in the afternoon and at the conclusion of benediction in the evening.

Holy hour services will be held Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

At the 7:30 o'clock mass at St. Joseph's church yesterday morning which was celebrated by Rev. Armand Baron, O.M.I., the members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. Rev. Fr. Baron also delivered the sermon at 10 o'clock and at the 9 and 10 o'clock masses. He dismissed at length the authority of the church in its law-making, explaining the various dogmas and the obligation on the part of the faithful to obey them. Rev. Louis A. Nolan, O.M.I., celebrated the 8 o'clock mass and also gave the high mass at 10:30 o'clock.

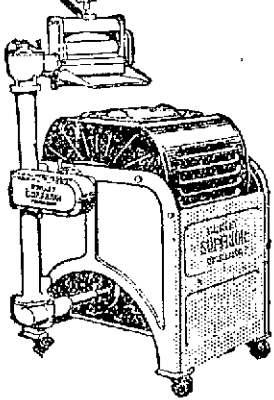

The members of the League of the Sacred Heart received communion in a

THE KNIGHTS OF SIR GALAHAD

"The Boy and the Church" was the subject of the address by F. W. Lincoln at St. Anne's church last evening. The talk was given in connection with the organization of the Knights of Sir Galahad, an order which it is proposed to form among the boys of the church. He stated that in 130 of the 200 parishes of which he is the boy's work director, the Sir Galahad movement has been organized and proved successful by giving the boys an ideal to work for, instilling religion into their lives and giving them a wholesome outlook on life. The boys need the church and the church needs the boys and the movement is founded to give them something of their own.

The regular service was conducted by Rev. Appleton Gramis, assisted by Rev. F. S. Beattie. Several violin solos were played by Alessandro Nicolini, who also assisted the choir and the Guild of St. Cecilia in the services.

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. Mary Keller of 132 Benton St., Sisterville, W. Va., was perplexed about her daughter until her own druggist told her they used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at his house, and she did likewise. Miss Irene Mazierska of 90 Peter St., Buffalo, N. Y., is glad her attention was called to Syrup Pepsin.

fever blisters, lack of energy and appetite, sleeplessness, indigestion. A dose can be given in these conditions & any member of the family however young or old as Syrup Pepsin is a simple compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasing aromatics, and perfectly safe.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. Keep Syrup Pepsin in your medicine chest.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced.

A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, sores and

"How I Found the True Church," Topic of Address by Boston Man

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Holy Name society of St. Andrew's church, North Billerica, was held last evening in Matthew hall. "How I Found the True Church" was the topic discussed by William E. Kerrish of Boston, an interesting and able speaker who treated his subject in detail, keeping his audience at attention during his entire talk. President Edward M. Quinn presided and also addressed the members.

Rev. John M. Cunningham, spiritual director of the society spoke of the excellent work of the organization and praised its members for their loyalty and spirit of co-operation which had been such a factor in the accomplishments of the society.

The recently elected officers of the society are: President, Edward M. Quinn; vice president, James P. Con-

BURNS PROVED FATAL

Woman Burned in Her Home in Salem Street Dies at Hospital

Miss Nellie Doherty, aged 55 years and crippled, received burns in her home, 213 Salem street, yesterday morning that resulted in her death in the early afternoon at the Lowell Corporation hospital, where she had been removed for treatment.

Miss Doherty lived with her two sisters. While the sisters were at church yesterday morning she attempted to move something on the stove and as a result her clothing caught fire. Her screams roused neighbors in the same house and they broke into the house and found her in the kitchen with her clothing ablaze.

While several neighbors extinguished the flames, her body was sent in to the ambulance and fire department and an alarm sounded from box 129. Upon the arrival of the ambulance it was seen that Miss Doherty's injuries were serious and she was removed to the Lowell Corporation hospital.

Corporation hospital. The fire apparatus arrived at about the same time the ambulance did, but had their run for nothing as the fire had not spread to the building.

Dr. Marshall L. Alling, medical examiner, viewed the body yesterday afternoon and announced that death was due to accidental causes.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Miss Lillian Desmond and William Courneen have the leading roles in "The Divorce Question," timely play to be presented this week by Al Linttringer's stock players at the Lowell Opera House. The opening performance will be given tomorrow afternoon, the high school players having the use of the house this afternoon and evening. Tickets may be purchased or reservations made at the box office any time this evening. The advance sale, which started last Wednesday, has been heavy.

Mr. Courneen will play the part of J. J. Desmond and the part of his sister, Mamma, will be played by Miss Desmond. Richard Morgan will have the part of the priest and Malcolm MacLeod and Edna Earl Andrews will play the estranged pair. John Rowe will play the part of the church sexton and depicts an old Irishman just brimming with blarney. Jack Rayold will have a detective's part. Miss Fera Chandler, the heroine, is well cast.

The play is one of vital interest and importance at this time. It is a serious drama with just enough comedy to keep it from becoming too sad.

It is a story that appeals to both men and women alike and teaches a great lesson.

The play is given in one act, the story of a little Catholic church, Miss Desmond, daughter of the estranged couple and a sister of J. J. Desmond, has a highly emotional role that will bring forth her best talents. Mr. Courneen has played this character before and gives a remarkable performance. Miss Desmond plays the part of a cheap dance hall singer who has had quite a tussle making her way in life, due solely to the separation of her parents when she was at a tender age. The play has its sad parts, but it also is bright in spots. All in all it sums up as a great contribution to the spoken drama. The Linttringer players have rehearsed faithfully under the vigilant eye of Mr. Rayold and are certain to give their usual highly creditable performance.

There will be a special Friday matinee, making ten performances in all this week. Choice seats are being disposed of rapidly and advance reservations should be made by those who wish to be certain that they will see the play. The box office phone number is 281.

CAPT. O'HAY TO SPEAK

Secretary Manager George F. Wells of the chamber of commerce today announced that he has secured Capt. Irving O'Hay, U. S. Army, retired, as speaker for the membership luncheon to be held in Liberty hall on Feb. 19. Capt. O'Hay is a most interesting speaker with a great store of personal experiences to draw from. He is truly the "Soldier of Fortune" depicted by Richard Harding Davis in the great work of that name by the late novelist. Capt. O'Hay, and you could call him General O'Hay, has had a life crisscrossed full of excitement, fun and adventure. He has been in a number of minor foreign revolutions, has fought for many causes, some of them pretty hazy and indistinct. He has an interesting personality and is the sort of "warrior" that is the humor of the wisest. He has a humor of the sort that never fails to win his auditors.

Capt. O'Hay has appeared before the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and other large bodies and has never failed to score as a big success.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS IN CHELMSFORD

Lively interest centres today in the annual Chelmsford town election, officers being voted for by the various classes, precincts to serve during the coming year. The polls were open at 12 o'clock this noon and will remain open until 8 o'clock tonight.

The polling places are as follows: Precinct 1, Centre town hall; precinct 2, North town hall; precinct 3, Historical hall, West Chelmsford; precinct 4, schoolhouse, East Chelmsford.

Three contests on the official ballot are attracting attention in this hottest of recent town election polls. Win J. Quigley, present member of the board of assessors, is being opposed by Jas. P. Dunnegan, former incumbent, who desires to come back.

The school committee battle promises to be a war of attrition. John McAdams of the Westlands section, Chas. Clough and Henry A. Bunch of the Centre are new candidates. For the health board, Abbot L. Emery, now completing a three-year term, is being opposed by Elliptical Brown of Westlands.

The pre-election campaign has been the hottest in the history of Chelmsford from many viewpoints. Mr. Dunnegan, aiming to quash Mr. Quigley's aspirations, has been conducting a very vigorous campaign and, according to reports, has a strong following in his home village. Dunnegan also claims many supporters in the East and West Chelmsfords, and expects to win.

The Quigley forces are not worrying. With three years to his credit and supported by many citizens who have followed his work closely, the candidate for re-election, backed by his loyal followers, is confident of defeating Dunnegan.

The other town officers being voted for in Chelmsford today are as follows: Moderator, Walter Perham; town clerk, Harold Patterson; selectman, George Rigby; treasurer and collector of taxes, Ervin W. Sweetser; constable, Fred J. Vinay; library trustees, Albert Davis, A. Heady Park and Louis L. Snow; park commissioner, Fred L. Fletcher; overseer of the poor, George Rigby.

A meeting of the Chelmsford finance committee will be held this evening at the Centre town hall at 7:30 o'clock to hear any registered voters who are interested in any article in the warrant for the annual town meeting, to be held on Monday, Feb. 11.

WINS TRIP TO NEW YORK

Joseph Smith of 175 Hall street was the winner in the drawing contest at Associate hall on Saturday night and as a result he will be a member of the party of fifteen to enjoy a trip to New York at the expense of the Associates' hall management. CAUGHT WITH BIG SUPPLY OF LIQUOR

Joseph Hogan, a former taxicab driver, was arrested by federal and municipal officers in Lawrence yesterday, charged with violating the liquor law. About 500 bottles of liquor valued at $500 were seized. The liquor was being trucked to Hogan's home at the time it was seized. It bore Canadian government stamps and seals and is believed to have just arrived from the border.

TO ANNOUNCE NAME OF PEACE WINNER

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4. The name of the winner of the American peace award will be announced tonight at a meeting in the Academy of Music.

John W. Davis, former American ambassador to Great Britain, the principal speaker, will reveal the name of the author of plan 1469, which was selected by the jury of award from more than 22,000 manuscripts submitted. At the same time, Mr. Davis will present the winner with a check for $5,000—one-half the amount of the award. Edward W. Bok, the creator, having stipulated that the other half shall be paid 75 and when the plan passes the scrutiny, or if and when the jury of award decides that an adequate degree of popular support has been demonstrated for it.

Announcement of the winner's name, which is known to only one person—a member of the policy committee—will not be made until near the close of the meeting. Then the author of plan 1469 will be called to the platform and the award presented.

Myville E. Stone, co-sponsor of the Associated Press and a member of the award policy committee, will preside at the meeting. In addition to Mr. Davis, addresses will be delivered by Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of war, and Miss Esther Lape, a member of the policy committee, who had charge of the practical details of the award.

HAIL RECOGNITION OF SOVIET BY BRITAIN

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.—The Bolshevik press hails the extension of recognition by Great Britain to the soviet government not so much as an act of good will on the part of the new labor government in London as the inevitable result of the soviet success. All the newspapers declare it is of the utmost importance internationally particularly with reference to what they have long considered inevitable differences between France and England.

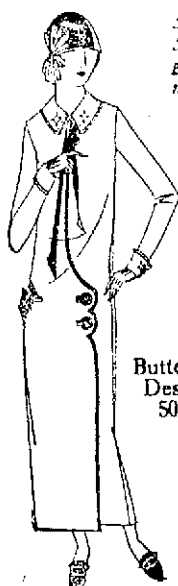

N. Stokloff, editor of Izvestia, expressed the opinion that the British step undoubtedly will have an influence upon the United States' policy toward Russia, despite American statements to the contrary.

INTERESTING ADDRESS

Rev. John W. Keyes, S. J.,
Addresses League of Catholic Women

"The Sterling-Reed and Kindred Bills" was the subject of a very interesting address by Rev. John W. Keyes, S. J., before the members and friends of the League of Catholic Women in Liberty hall, yesterday afternoon. The lecture was the first in a series of similar talks on civics, the speaker being introduced by the chairman of the civics committee, Miss Eva Blanchard.

"Do you know," spoke Fr. Keyes, "that in the last congress there were as many as 160 bills brought up which in one way or another would curtail the rights of the parents in this matter of education?"

"Is there anything nearer, dearer, closer to the home, than the education of the children?"

"When the proponents of this bill speak to an audience they will say, 'Is not education a thing of general welfare?' They appeal to the preamble to the Constitution, and it was with this appeal in view that Mr. Smith of Georgia proposed this bill, and in this bill he advocated nationalized education."

"That bill was defeated, and then Mr. Smith and Mr. Towner put their heads together, and said they must exclude the idea of federal control. And the Smith-Towner bill was produced. Then it became the Towner-Sterling bill and now it is the Sterling-Reed bill."

It is exactly the same bill. The words are changed, but the spirit of the bill still remains. In case of difference of opinion between a state and the national secretary of education, the matter is to be reported to congress, and the appointment is to be withheld from the state. Does not that speak of federal control?"

"Do you think the federal government is going to spend a hundred million dollars on the state without specifying how it is to be spent? That

PARIS COMMENT ON WILSON'S DEATH

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Former President Wilson's death was featured prominently by this morning's newspapers, indeed almost to the exclusion of other topics. There are many pictures of the American war president and copious biographies. Most of the commentators adversely criticize his achievements, though the reasons given differ according to the political leanings of the writers.

Andre Tardieu in the Echo National, writes: "The people of France will not forget that if Woodrow Wilson might have been mistaken in certain political aspects of the peace, he gave his soul, mind and will to the war. He left nothing on the battlefield of peace for those ideas of collaboration to which the short-sighted egoists who put the world where it is now, have persisted in turning their backs."

From after looking him, because unjustly severe to him. When time shall have struck a just mean, our country will remember that this great associate in the war was deprived of office for having wished to remain our associate in the peace."

Devere says: "No man ever, after rushing such high hopes, finally caused such deep disappointment."

FRANCE WILL NEVER FORGET WILSON

My country will never forget the great president who played such an important part in the decision which by the United States came to take her place beside France and her allies in the war of right against might."

Congressman Rogers, during the entire term of the war, I served on the house committee on foreign affairs, and thereby had occasion to have frequent personal contact with President Wilson. I never failed to be conscious of his personal charm and magnetism and was invariably treated by him with the highest courtesy and consideration. To my mind the passing of Wilson is the passing of a man who will loom large always in the history of his country. He lived in a time of stress and his habit of mind and viewpoint was such that he never shrunk from conflict or even strife if he saw his duty clearly. After the bitterness of the war period is over, after the same view of history has had an opportunity to exert itself, the world will have accurately appraised his contribution to human thought."

GRAYSON AND BARUCH

Physician and Financier
Friends and Confidants of
Wilson to the End

Bond Between Wilson and Grayson Almost as a Feeling of Father and Son

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press.) Many friends and confidants came into Woodrow Wilson's life after he entered the White House. Many also passed out. Of all those who came, two notably remained to his dying moment.

One was his physician, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson; the other was Bernard M. Baruch, the New York financier and counselor on the intricacies of the post war problems. Of the two, Mr. Wilson's relationship with Dr. Grayson was the more personal, the bond between them was almost as a feeling between father and son. Mr. Wilson's friendship for Mr. Baruch, although personal also was sustained on the foundation of two minds that ran along together on common causes.

Grayson, the confidant and friend of two presidents before Wilson, brought to the chief touch of nature which many declared were not part of Mr. Wilson's natural equipment. Nevertheless, it was a profound respect for these attributes which grew into close friendship and companionship.

Dr. Grayson was the son of a Virginia country doctor, orphaned early in life, who took his hard knocks while getting an education. From his father and from experience he probably inherited the innately human concepts of nature itself, as only the old style country doctor acquires them and these he brought to Woodrow Wilson.

The public mind most associates this physician, about whom it had heard so much, through the illness and death of Mr. Wilson. But long before Woodrow Wilson ever was heard of as a presidential possibility, Dr. Grayson was a naval officer attached to the White House as a physician to President Roosevelt. Because he knew something about human nature, birds, trees and animals, particularly horses, he was not long in becoming Colonel Roosevelt's aid and companion. There were other aids to be sure, but this young Virginia doctor, modest even to the point of being shy, soft spoken and gentle, in contrast to the more pompous and more formal of the President's aids, was the one President Roosevelt picked out when he wanted a companion for some exciting horse, back ride or something strenuous.

The American people were thrilled when President Roosevelt just to show some army officers that he asked of no one something he himself could not do, made his famous eight mile horse back ride from Washington to Warren, back and back in a cold steady rain that froze as it fell. Nobody mentioned that Dr. Grayson rode every foot of the way at his chief's side, and sometimes guided the president's horse when his spectacles were caught with ice.

President Roosevelt turned Grayson over to President Taft, with a recommendation for loyalty and he won Mrs. Taft's heart with his sympathetic devotion to her delicate health.

Woodrow Wilson had never heard of Cary T. Grayson when he stepped into the White House on March 14, 1913. On that day came in this in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.

Several physicians of the army and navy, including Grayson, were attached to the White House. Inauguration day with its spectacle and splendor lined all but one of them from the fixed post. Grayson elected to remain on duty. The first Mrs. Wilson, as she stepped through the White House portals in her first moments as its mistress, met with an unimportant but painful accident. A call for a doctor was answered immediately by Grayson.

Mrs. Wilson commended to her husband this modest young man, who seemed so devoted to duty. He became Mr. Wilson's aide and physician and as the years went on, his friend. No political wires were pulled, no influence figured in the disposition in one of the most coveted posts in Washington.

A little more than a year later, one hot August afternoon with a world war bursting into flame, the first Mrs. Wilson lay on her death bed. Her last words to Grayson were "Take good care of Woodrow, please." How well that promise was kept probably only a recording angel may know now.

Some time after Mrs. Wilson's death, Dr. Grayson introduced to Miss Helen Woodrow Jones, president Wilson's kinswoman and guest at the White House a friend of long acquaintance, Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt. Miss Jones took her into the small White House circle where Mr. Wilson met her. The lady later became Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Some time after that Mr. Wilson on recommendation of Secretary Daniels of the navy department, nominated Grayson for promotion to the rank of rear admiral. The real truth of that matter was that in conversation with Mr. Daniels soon before her death, the first Mrs. Wilson asked the secretary of the navy to give to her husband's physician and aide, some rank commensurate with his responsibility, and to insure his attachment to the White House against any routine arrangement. Grayson never knew he had been nominated for promotion until he read it in the newspapers. There was opposition, somewhat like that which attended President Roosevelt's promotion of General Wood. It so offended Grayson's modesty that later, when he had an opportunity to become rear admiral of the navy, he declined it.

Probably no one will ever know what the complexities and difficulties

WHERE WOODROW WILSON DIED

The federal government already has offered to do whatever is fitting to express the nation's reverence at the passing of a great leader. President Coolidge called yesterday at the house of bereavement, expressed his regret and his readiness to be helpful, and then issued a proclamation of 30 days official mourning. Over the White House and the government departments, on the nation's fighting ships at sea and over the outposts of American diplomacy in foreign lands, the Stars and Stripes were brought to half mast. Congress today recessed in respect for his memory and the whole machinery of the government, whose guiding genius he was for eight momentous years, will stand still on the day of his funeral.

The place of entombment has not been selected, but it is probable his body will be placed for a while in a Washington cemetery. There it will await the erection of a memorial to serve as his last resting place, and to perpetuate fittingly in stone the memory of those great days of crisis when the world hung upon his words.

Today the frayed remnant of his mortality lies in the chamber whose walls looked down yesterday upon the last scene of a career that had known all the heights and depths of human emotion. In death he appears as if in peaceful sleep, his features serene and composed and his square jaw set with the old determination. But the lines are somewhat deeper and heavier and the flashing fire of his eyes has gone out forever.

The bed on which Woodrow Wilson died and where his body rests is of massive oak, a reproduction of the bed built at the White House for Lincoln and used by every president since. It is of unusual length and has a golden American eagle over the head. It was made to the order of Mr. Wilson before he retired from the presidency and was installed in the S street house he had selected as his future home.

Although he had not known it well day since he crossed the threshold of the place of his retirement, or for months before, last Friday saw the beginning of the end of his long illness. His collapse during his western speaking trip in 1919, followed by a stroke of paralysis soon after his return to Washington, had made him almost an invalid long ago. Early last week, a slight digestive disorder further weakened his delicate vitality and on Friday his friend and physician, Dr. Grayson, found his condition growing hourly more serious.

He refused nourishment, and by Saturday night he was barely conscious. At 9 o'clock he fell asleep and never awakened again. It was at 11:15 a. m. that he finally went out. From first to last he was without pain, and in his last wakeful moments he appeared to be resting in complete comfort.

As the end approached, the little group watching in the sick room drew nearer and nearer. Mrs. Wilson sat on the bed beside him, with his almost lifeless hand in both of hers. Close by was his eldest daughter, Margaret Wilson; and Dr. Grayson, faithful in his ministrations since the first sign of illness more than four years ago, watched for some new way at least to help him as he crossed the bar.

But there was nothing to be done. More and more feebly became the pulse beat; there was a quickening of the breath; little by little the death rattle of the eyelids, a faint twitch, almost like a smile, across the wasted features, and the spirit of the great war president had burst at last the long weakening fetters that bound it to earth.

Thus, he who had dreamed a high dream of peace for all the world had found peace for himself and had left behind a world still tossed by strife and turmoil.

Thus, he against whom the had turned at last, after leading him through paths of greatest glory, found death gentle and even merciful.

Thus, with the soft chanting of hymns floating in the Sabbath air was written the last letter of that imperishable chapter of human history, comprising the life of Woodrow Wilson.

EX-PRESIDENT TAFT'S TRIBUTE TO WILSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Chief Justice William H. Taft of the supreme court, now the only living ex-president of the United States, yesterday paid the following tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson:

"Mr. Wilson, in the latter years of the war and the year following the armistice, was the greatest figure of the world's stage. No man in a century wielded more power and influence. He was born to command with confidence and courage, and courage gave him an opportunity to lead men."

Twenty-eighth president of the United States, and the first democrat to be elected to the White House. His address to Congress, would fill many volumes.

Whatever an army of Boswells may write, that will be the part in which he will be best remembered by coming generations.

Born in Staunton, Va., Dec. 28, 1856, of Scotch-Irish parentage, he was christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson and he was known in early life as "Tommy." After he was graduated from Princeton in 1883 he was known only as Woodrow Wilson. His father was the Rev. Joseph Ruggles Wilson, a Presbyterian clergyman, and his mother was Jessie Woodrow.

When he was two years old the fortunes of his father took the family to

Became Noted Writer
Successively, Mr. Wilson became professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr and at Wesleyan university and later professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton where, subsequently, he was elected to the presidency. Meanwhile, Prof. Wilson had gained high reputation as a writer. Some of his works, with the date of their production, were as follows: "The State, Elements of Historical and Practical Politics," (1885); "Mydan and Romney," (1893); "George Washington," (1894); "A History of the Constitutional Republic of the United States," (1895); "The Constitutional Government in the United States," (1898); "Free Life," (1913); "When a Man Comes to Himself," 1915; "On Being Human," (1916); "An Old Master and Other Political Essays," and "More Literary and Other Essays," were among his earlier writings. His state papers

Mexican Trouble Broke

Events in Mexico solved their own problem in a few months when Carranza, another newly risen leader, ejected Huerta who fled, American troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz and later President Wilson extended formal recognition to the Carranza government. But in 1920, Carranza himself died in the face of a revolution and the Mexican problem came back to a troubled administration for settlement. "Watchful waiting" was not alone Mr. Wilson's.

Handed Passports to Bernstorff

Committed U. S. to League

President Wilson's participation in the memorable peace congress has been described by many pens, friendly and unfriendly, and his part was indubitably written in recent history that it needs little attention in a brief resume of his life works.

Europe was changed by his oratory, his wit, and his personality, until they bemoaned his indomitable will to do things his way when he was convinced it was right. Then the sparks drew the secret meetings he had with Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando. It was determined to have a League of Nations covenant so inseparably intertwined with a peace treaty that no nation could accept one without accepting the other. The peace statesmen found that only by letting him have it could they get the provisions of peace they wanted. The result was a treaty in which all got something and it was denounced by its opponents as a breeder of war rather than a treaty of peace.

It would require a large volume to tell all the interesting things that happened to Woodrow Wilson while who chafed under the restraints, as a morning in the school room with the "schoolmaster" at the head of the table.

Won Nobel Peace Prize
Woodrow Wilson himself would not wish it. "I won it in 1920," he accepted the Nobel prize for being "the person who was promoted most of best the fraternity of nations and the abolishment or destruction of standing armies and the formation and increase of peace congresses," he said.

"The cause of peace and the cause of truth are of one family. Whatever has been done in the past is the first step toward the glory of the peace of the future,"

Woodrow Wilson lived his last years and died in "the glory of the promise of the future" confident that right as he saw it would ultimately prevail.

"The cause of peace, but he lost faith in some of the human beings who were its inevitable elements."

"By the president of the United States of America

His early profession as a lawyer was abandoned to enter academic life. In this chosen field he attained the highest rank as an educator, and became his nation's pre-eminent intellectual leader. As the first president of the University of Toronto, he endeavored to bring to the institution the same high standards of scholarship which he had found in his fellow citizens to be the chief excellence of the state of New Jersey. The duties of this high office were commended to him by the confidence of the people of the United States, who twice selected him to their chief magistracy of the republic. He led the nation through the terrible struggle of the World war with a heroic idealism which never failed him. He gave utterance to the aspiration of humanity with an eloquence which took the nations with an undiminished America a new and enlarged vision of the destiny of mankind.

THE LATE WOODROW WILSON

Ex-President Woodrow Wilson, dead at his home in Washington, is widely mourned by those who admired him for his high ideals and his devotion to the cause of world peace. It fell to his lot to be president of the United States in one of the greatest upheavals that the world has ever known. Elected in 1912 as a result of the split in the republican party caused by the candidacy of former President Roosevelt on the Bull Moose ticket against President Taft, the democratic victory was easily won.

The first four years of President Wilson's incumbency were fruitful in important legislative reforms. He had definite aims of what the country needed for the restoration of prosperity and he adopted the most direct method of giving effect to the policies he had advocated in his campaign for election.

Among the foremost of these was the establishment of the Federal Reserve System which put the financial affairs of the country upon a sound business basis, and supplied the elasticity of the currency, the lack of which had resulted in many ruinous panics. If President Wilson had done nothing else than setting up the Federal Reserve system, he would deserve the lasting gratitude of the people of this nation. But for that measure the country could never have gone through the war with Germany without a financial cataclysm that would have spread disaster throughout the land. But that was only one of many reforms effected during the first term of the Wilson administration. The tariff was revised and steps were taken to build up a great merchant marine.

There was trouble on the Mexican border and the president was severely criticized because he did not declare war against Mexico. The oil interests were then active as they are at present and have been ever since. The president, however, resisted all appeals and all the agitation in favor of the war against Mexico. He foresaw the spread of the World War and did not wish to take the risk of involving the United States in war with Mexico at a time when more vital interests might demand our entrance to the world conflict. In this policy, President Wilson was right. Furthermore, he stood out against the declaration of war against Germany until patience ceased to be a virtue. The sinking of the Lusitania clinched the matter, and soon after the president gave Ambassador Bernstorff his passports and came out with a strong statement favoring a declaration of war. The result need not be recited. The American forces were sent to Europe in formidable array at a time when the allies were fighting as they said "with their backs to the wall," and begging for assistance from this country. The strength of the United States thrown into the conflict soon turned the tide of battle in favor of the allies, and as a result, the victory was won.

As commander of the forces, President Wilson showed excellent judgment at every point; but when it came to frame the treaty of peace and the constitution of the League of Nations, he made a fatal mistake. He went to Europe himself and took a prominent part in deciding what powers would be dissected and what others should be enriched in territory or commercial advantage. If, instead of going in person to participate in the peace congress, he had selected a delegation including a couple of senators and a few other prominent statesmen, they might have returned with a different story. They would not have gone ahead and done things without consulting the authorities at home, as did President Wilson. He felt that whatever he did would be endorsed by the people at home if not by congress. On his return he discovered his mistake. The senate was opposed to his treaty and to the League of Nations. He started out on a speaking tour of the country and finding that the people were also opposed to his League of Nations, he simply went to pieces physically and mentally. It was on that tour that he sustained a paralytic shock which left him a cripple for the remainder of his days. The overwhelming majority given Harding in 1920 as an anti-league candidate crushed Wilson's lingering hopes in the result of a referendum.

President Wilson was an idealist. He aimed at establishing universal peace by a federation of the nations of the world, including the United States; but this nation was not ready to join the bankrupt European powers in that enterprise. As a result, the whole scheme became largely a fizzle to the utter disappointment and chagrin of Mr. Wilson. He never recovered from the shock of disappointment although to the last, he indulged the hope that at some time his dream of universal peace through a League of Nations would be realized. No one knows what the future may bring. At present the people of the United States are not ready to participate in such a movement; but the agitation goes on and what the final result will be cannot now be predicted.

President Wilson's name will live with those of the greatest men who have occupied the high position of president, but what his rank will be in the category of great statesmen remains for history to determine. The effect of his life and his works cannot now be properly estimated, but it can be truly said of him that his highest aims were for the good of humanity and for that cause his health and life were sacrificed. He was willing to give the United States assume heavy responsibilities in the cause of world peace; but the people by their votes vetoed his proposition. It can be said that in spite of the haste with which preparations were made for entering the war, that his administration from the very beginning was free from scandal and corruption. Wilson was the most scholarly man and the finest writer that ever held the presidency and some of his state papers deserve a place in literature for their classical excellence.

SCHOOL EXPENDITURES

If the recommendation of the committee of the school board on salary increases should be finally adopted, the economic policy inaugurated by Mayor Donovan would be well abandoned and to liberal increase be general.

The committee fails to recommend salary recommendations that are demanded by a matter of simple justice, yet it offers a double increase when a single is apparently what was intended. Fortunately, Mr. Donovan's motion for a reconsideration will give the board an opportunity to rectify errors and bring the proposed increases within reasonable limits.

The matter that seems imperative in view of the numerous demands and the rather depressed industrial conditions prevailing at the present time.

The proposed increase in salaries plus the increase in the estimates amounts to $179,855.68 which is obviously excessive. The junior high school, we submit, is responsible in a measure for the recent increase in the expenditures of the school department.

TRUCKS FOR SHORT HAULS

In a recent announcement by the Pennsylvania Railroad company that it had made a contract with a Philadelphia transportation concern to deliver short distance package freight to the thickly settled territory between Philadelphia, Pa. and Wilmington, Del., the two cities being 25 miles apart, is revealed a forward step on the part of a railroad organization which has the largest gross earnings and fuel and light, $2.04 for "mudholes."

These figures cover only the income actually spent. They do not include the 10 or 20 per cent which experts say must be saved to provide properly for old age and success.

But the budget system is too impractical for most families. Most people prefer to buy what they want while they have the money without counting how much they have left for other purposes, or how much they will affect the budget appropriation.

There is some consolation in the fact that while the board reports that it now takes $1.55 to buy what cost $1 before the war, an outlay of $2.05 was required in purchasing the same stuff at the price peak in July, 1920.

BRIBING POLICE OFFICIALS

There is a matter of bribery under investigation in Lawrence. It seems that a resident made the charge that he paid a city official $150 in lieu of protection for an illegal liquor saloon, and that his place of business was closed up a few days later by the police. Evidently, he feels that the other party "did not deliver the goods."

The official against whom the charge is made says he was offered bribes, even $1000 a week for protection—he is head of the police department—but did not accept any.

We always had an idea that if an officer had a high reputation for integrity and fidelity to duty, nobody who knew his character would dare offer him a bribe. But it is not every police official who is known to everybody else.

The matter of bribing a police official is a very serious offense for both parties; but particularly for the officer who solicits or accepts a bribe. Here is the statute as amended last year:

Chapter 265, General Laws, Section 26.

A police officer who corruptly requests or accepts a gift or gratuity, or a promise to make a gift or gratuity or to do an act beneficial to him under an agreement, or with an understanding that he will perform in any particular manner, or abstain from performing any act coming within the course of his duty as such officer, or as a consideration for any work or service in connection therewith, shall forfeit his office, be forever disqualified to hold any public office, trust or appointment under the constitution or laws of the commonwealth, and be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than ten years, or by a fine of not more than $5000 and imprisonment in jail for not more than two years; and any person who corruptly gives, offers or promises to a police officer any gift or gratuity whatever, with intent to influence his act, or to secure his inaction in any matter coming within the course of his duty, as such officer, or as a consideration for any work or service in connection therewith, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years, or by a fine of not more than $5000 and imprisonment in jail for not more than one year.

Approved April 7, 1923.

With such a penalty as that hanging over his head, the police official who would accept a bribe would certainly take serious risks.

OBSTRUCTING THE STREETS

It seems that the police will have to adopt more stringent regulations relative to parking automobiles in the vicinity of Keany square. It is quite a frequent occurrence for street cars to be held up between the square and the canal in East Merrimack street by automobiles parked so that the path of the street cars is obstructed. Sometimes, big trucks are left on the side of the street so that cars cannot pass until the operator gets out and bumps up the driver of the truck that obstructs the thoroughfare. Sometimes the owners are found doing business in adjoining stores and on one or two occasions the street railway men have located them in nearby lunch rooms. It seems that the only way to deal with these reckless people is to have them and their vehicles sent to the police station to meet the charge of willful obstruction of public streets.

SAVING THE BABIES

Twenty-five years ago, Dr. Luther Emmett Holt wrote a book about the care and feeding of children. A publisher took a chance on it and, since then, the book has been translated into 12 languages. In all these years, it has outsold any book of fiction.

It gives us great pleasure to find that a useful best-seller has out-sold fiction books which at their best are mental narcotics or drugs. The most hopeful tendency of our generation is its intense care of the rising generation which will inherit the problems our generation has failed to solve.

COTTON

A cotton farmer is apt to start about next May 1, F. D. Johnson reports. He is president of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners' associations.

He points out that England, which bought 54 per cent of its cotton from America in 1913, now buys only 45 per cent from the United States. All this does not seem to confirm his prediction as to the cotton market.

The boll weevil has been gradually destroying this great American industry, but its ravages are not so destructive as to cause a general cotton famine.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN

Police Inspector John A. Walsh is perhaps the best known man locally in the "East and West" of Lowell. Some 20 years ago, his name, that recurrent event which happened half a century ago but often kept his history engraved, prominent in the lives of the Lowell of two decades ago, when it was but a tiny village with a population of 1500 people. The inspector would rather be believed than much, rather than the facts which he so lightly recalls but nevertheless he distinctly remembers when the soldiers were drilling in preparation for service along the Amazon and Amazon river.

Very Good Story

Ex-chairman Lusk of the shipping board said in a Washington address, "Some critics of the shipping board and its work so thoroughly, and this work is in their opinion so simple and easy, that when I listen to them I remember a certain young man. A great banker said to this young man: 'I am ashamed of my failure to keep abreast of modern science. Take the electric light, for instance; I haven't the least idea how it works.' The young man gave him a patronizing smile. 'Why?' she said, 'It's very simple really. You just press a button, and the light comes on—that's all there is to it.'"

No Wonder She Laughed

The proprietor of a certain store often complains to his employees of their indifference in the matter of possible sales. One day hearing a salesman say to a customer: "No, we have not had any for a long time," the proprietor, unable to contain himself, began to work himself up into the usual rage. Fixing a glassy eye on the salesman, he said to the customer: "We have plenty in reserve, madam—plenty down stairs." Whereupon the customer looked dazed; and then, to the amusement of the proprietor, burst into hysterical laughter and left the shop. "What did she say to you?" demanded the proprietor of the salesman. "We haven't had any rain lately."

The Haunted Room

"You've never been inside a haunted room?" The stranger said. "No doubt you picture a room; Old hangings, rotten floors, black holes here and there. Year after year malignant spiders spin damp slowly dripping down the mouldering walls. But in the wastecor when the twilight falls? Or else you picture tapestry and oak And flickering firelight, where the midnight stroke Brings some romantic phantom—some white bride. The would-be credulous tenants' boast and pride? Such rooms chambers have I never known. But I do know a haunted room—my own. Modern and bright, with pictures, carpets, and books; Nothing suggesting specters in its looks. But underneath the carpet, there's a (No—I've no story of a hidden board!) A single board that creaks beneath the tread. And with that simple summons brings a dead. What dead, you wonder? Not a thing to see; No visitant for any soul but me. And what for me? Myself, myself, as I dwell, hound and dreamed there year by year gone by. My many selves, younger, with what I hold dear. On destiny, what foolish, happy aims! They dwell there too—that hoarse creaked even then. Beneath their step, and they come back again. Recalled, for me, when in my careless tread It creaks anew—but they are friendly dead." —From the Glasgow Herald.

est member of the traffic squad to speak harshly of lay walkers. After directing traffic at the corner of Central and Merrimack streets for several months, he comes out strongly for some regulation that would force pedestrians to cross the streets at the crossings and not in any way they see fit. They make our work twice as hard, he said, because they apparently walk with their eyes and ears closed to the danger which is on every side. Some after time, accidents are avoided only because the automobilist is "too big job" whereas the pedestrian is just walking.

Considerable interest has been shown throughout the city concerning the T. J. Kimball's attempt to get the prize winning squad of the 12th Infantry here to give an exhibition. This squad won its honors in a drill held in the early 1912, at which were present and competing squads from the navy and marine corps so they now have the title of the best drilling squad in New England. Sgt. Kimball figures an exhibition by this squad would assist him in securing recruits and would also show the people the splendid physical condition of Uncle Sam's best.

Residents of the upper Christian Hill section of the city have been alarmed several evenings of the past two weeks by a deep booming sound, resembling thunder, which appeared to come from the direction of the reservoir. At first it was thought the sound was that of thunder, but it was later found to have been caused by the ice in the low-service reservoir cracking. At this time of the year there is about six inches of ice on the reservoir. So long as the water level is high enough to support the ice there is no sound but as soon as the water is lowered, the ice breaks and the sound of its breaking is heard quite a distance. Older residents of the hill section are used to this but recent comers will probably welcome this explanation.

An automobilist who attempted to drive through the square on a recent evening with his headlights on, after he was arrested and taken to the police station, was told by the police that he had been caught by the fact that he had driven with his headlights on. The police officer said that he had seen the car and that he had seen the headlights on. The automobilist said that he had been caught by the fact that he had driven with his headlights on. The police officer said that he had seen the car and that he had seen the headlights on.

TOO MANY ANSWER THE CALL OF SATAN

A parallel between Buck, canine hero of Jack London's "The Call of the Wild," and the many human beings who answer the call of Satan and cease to follow the teachings of their finer natures acquired by civilization, was drawn by Rev. Percy L. Thomas in his evening sermon yesterday at the First Congregational church.

Mr. Thomas sketched the early life of Buck in a California home where he was a household pet and lived in accordance with the higher nature of himself, until by a series of happenings he was transported to the north and turned loose in the wilds to make a living as best he might. He became the leader of a pack of wolves and assumed their life in the pack as naturally as if he had never been anything else.

Many lives of men are the same way, no thought of yielding to the temptation of Satan entering into their minds until they have the close guardianship of Jesus Christ and the call of Satan becoming too great, they submit and a reversal of nature with the subordination of the finer instincts follows. When the end comes, as it does to each, it is not a question of power or wealth on earth, that counts, but who answered "The call of the Wild" or the call of God. "When the wild calls, say 'No' and turn to God for guidance."

The association is planning to act as a "clearing house" for all activities of Lowell Greek-speaking citizens, aiding them in functioning as true Americans and also helping them in athletic and musical activities.

THE THIRD WEEK OF THEIR CAMPAIGN

Many people were turned away from Central Baptist church last evening, when the Democrat evangelists opened their third revival campaign in Lowell. A double quartet sang.

Mrs. Demarest talked about Joseph and Mary, drew lessons from the life of the Christ-child and declared that even the stable where he was born was transformed when the light and glory of God illuminated the stable through the birth of the Lord Jesus. The evangelist said.

PETS

The cat sits in the jangle nook
Where it is snug and warm,
But the dog goes where his master goes
Nor cares how great the storm.
The cat will purr to feel its coat
Stroked in the proper wise,
But a dog's heart thrills at every glance
From out his master's eyes.

And though the cat may dwell with you
A guest beneath your roof,
Its spirit is forevermore
Something apart, aloof.
But oh, a dog—so great his love
That while his life endures,
His flesh and blood, his heart and soul,
His every thought is yours.

I like a cat and I admire
Its splendid dignity.
The way it takes your milk and meat
Yet keeps its spirit free;
Yet I would rather have the love
Of one small mongrel cur
Than all the selfish tolerance
Of all the cats that purr.

Gas Means Economy In The Kitchen

Every thrifty housewife knows that she can practice more economy in the kitchen than in any other room of her house or apartment. Practical hints looking toward the economical use of Gas service are therefore welcome.

The six suggestions listed here are easy to follow and, if put into practice, will effect a considerable saving. Flames should be protected from side drafts. Have your cooking utensil ready to put on the burner before the burner is lighted.

Turn off the Gas when the cooking is done. When winter comes to a boil, turn down the Gas or move the Gas to a smaller burner.

Don't heat a gallon of water when a pint will do. Small burners are Gas savers. Use them in preference to the large burners whenever possible.

NEW MINISTER COMING

Rev. H. W. Haynes Has Been Community Leader in Beverly for Four Years

Rev. Harold W. Haynes who comes to the First Universalist church of Lowell on March 1st as its new minister, leaves the First Universalist church of Beverly after a pastorate of four years, during which time he was deeply involved in general community affairs in the North Shore city in addition to his pastoral duties in one of the city's largest churches. His education, training and experience, Rev. Mr. Haynes seems admirably fitted to take over the pastorate of the local church and maintain its work at the same high standards which marked the long service there of the late Rev. Caleb B. Fisher. Rev. Mr. Haynes was born in Oldtown, Maine. His education was gained in the public schools of that town and later at Colby and Bowdoin colleges. For ten years he was engaged in business, but then turned toward the ministry and pursued his theological studies at Canton Theological school and specialized in postgraduate and psychology at St. Lawrence university, both in Canton, New York.

His first pastorate was at Mount Vernon, N. Y., and later he had churches in Augusta, Maine, and Berlin and Gorham, N. H., before going to Beverly. During his four years in Beverly he also filled the pulpit of the First Universalist church of Essex. His community interests include the Y. M. C. A. Men's club of which he is chaplain and he also holds the presidency of the Essex County Sunday School union. He is chairman of Burlington Lodge A. F. and A. M. and is a chapter and commander of the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. Mrs. Haynes also has been active in the community life of Beverly and at present is finishing her second term as president of the Lathrop club. While in Gorham, N. H., she was president of the Women's club of the town. She is much sought as a lecturer and is affiliated with the President's club of Boston. They have one son, Stephen S. Haynes, age 11.

THE ORDER OF FOREIGN WARS

Capt. Percy J. Wilson of this city has been nominated for councillor on the list of officers to be chosen for 1924 duties at the annual meeting of Massachusetts commandery, M.O.F.W., to be held at the Algonquin club, Boston, this week. The other nominations for commandery executive positions are as follows:

Commander, Col. Henry L. Kincaid; vice commander, Lt. Allen W. Wacker; secretary, Lt. Col. Porter B. Chace; treasurer, Lt. John S. Pickett; registrar, Capt. Charles Keeney; judge advocate, Maj. Frank M. Sawtell; surgeon, Lt. Horace P. Stevens; chaplain, Capt. Patrick B. Murphy; council, Capt. James B. Parker, Col. Holten B. Perkins and Capt. William J. Crozier.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication has been received from Lawyer Charles S. O'Connor of Boston, a well known orator and former school committee man who has spoken at various times in this city and is well known here:

February 1, 1924.

Editor of the Lowell Sun:—

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly afford me space in your valuable paper to reply briefly to the editorial in the Courier-Citizen, in its issue of Jan. 23.

To reply at length would dignify a point which has been made and which I am sure will be read by the people of certain parts of Boston, namely the West, North and South Ends, East Boston, South Boston and my own home district, South Boston, as to spreading unsightly community, where pictures and caricatures, thus and out-throats collect their feet and prey upon simple-minded citizens and upon each other, and where "blackmailers and bootleggers and panders ply their trade." After an occasional reading of the columns of the Courier-Citizen in the past, I wonder it can take umbrage at the existence of "trade" of the bootlegger.

The ignorance displayed by the editorial writer in the above mentioned article, though pardonable, is amusing and interesting to one who has lived his whole life in South Boston, and into which district the Courier-Citizen editor has undoubtedly never set foot. That paper informs me for the first time that in the above named districts, we have been living in the "underworld," in the company of "things and creatures" I am wondering how we have managed all these years to escape this "red terror." It is a pity that the "red terror" is not a reality, and our wonderful increase when the Courier-Citizen tells us for the first time what we have been experiencing without our knowledge. How some pure-minded souls must feel in sympathy as well as in fear of us. We continue to wonder how these same districts, comprising the "sprawling, unsightly community" could have added as they have, such an increase of spiritual, industrial and civic progress to the city of the "tabernacles and the Hallelujahs."

South Boston in particular has long been the target for slander and vilification from such sources as the editorialist of the Courier-Citizen, from which other districts mentioned have likewise not altogether escaped. It has been obvious to all fair-minded and truthful men and women who know the facts, that this hostility is based upon racial and religious prejudice and a dash of politics, and not upon sociological considerations. In other words, they hate us because they do not know us, and they do not know us because they hate us.

During the late war, South Boston furnished for the defense of the flag, more soldiers and more enlisted men in proportion to its 50,000 people than any other district of similar size in the entire country, a record commented upon by national war officials.

For thirty-five years there has never been a deliberate murder in South Boston. In all its history, according to police and court records, that district has been practically free from serious crime. It is a matter of public record that a house of ill-repute has never existed in South Boston, nor was there ever a complaint made, backed by even a suspicion, that such an establishment was in existence in South Boston. The fact that this hostility is based upon racial and religious prejudice and a dash of politics, and not upon sociological considerations. In other words, they hate us because they do not know us, and they do not know us because they hate us.

South Boston has always been known as a community where a lady can walk from one end to the other, without an escort at any hour of the night, or the dead hours of the early morning, and not be accosted or annoyed by anyone. The Back Bay, the spot sacred in the mind and imagination of the Courier-Citizen, can make no such boast. Both of these statements are matters of record.

South Boston has sent more young men and young women into the religious life for the work of Christ, in all the great cities of the country, as well as for that special spiritual labor of sacrifice, self-renunciation and self-immolation in the jungles of savage lands, than any other district of similar size in this country. This is also a matter of record. Many of them are to be found among the Oblate Fathers, secular clergy and convents of your own city.

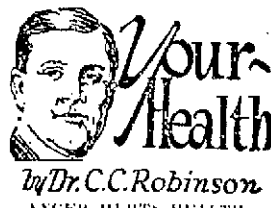

It is a peculiarly impressive coincidence that appearing immediately before the attack on the people of the districts of Boston referred to, the Courier-Citizen defends Hall, former secretary of the Interior, the man who accepted loans from Dukeny and Sinclair to the amount of $125,000, and then leased to these men the property of the government for exploitation, and that paper pleads that popular judgment be suspended until the facts are fully known. It is regrettable that the Courier-Citizen itself does not reserve judgment until it is in possession of the facts. Perhaps it is too much to expect some people to be consistent. It depends upon whose ox is gored.

If there are bootleggers in South Boston—and what community, town or city is without them?—they grow wealthy on the patronage of the Back Bay, where money is easy, responsive and more abundant, and where men are with the Volstead act with their voices and against it with their breath, which they are in favor of prohibition, but against its enforcement.

South Boston—and the same can be said of the other districts referred to—is the home of God-fearing and law-abiding people, and filled with men and women who have taken high places, not only in Boston, but throughout the country, in every line of intellectual and material endeavor. We are not one proud of South Boston—we love it, and they who know it best, love it most. If I were an invalid, or a cripple, or blind, or poor, or a wayward boy or girl or a fatherless and motherless child, I would be fortunate indeed to be blessed with a home in South Boston, where hearts are clean, purses open and the spirit of real charity and brotherly love are the every-day characteristics of the lives of its people. We ought to be grateful that our disenfranchisement is not within the power of the Courier-Citizen.

The editorialist of the Courier-Citizen says that "this literary field of modern Boston is certainly wide open and inviting to some American Hugo Balzac, or Zola." It is obviously natural that he should refer to the above place, since they, like himself, have dealt in fiction. But it is to be hoped, in the interest of truth and decency, should any such write the story of "modern Boston" that he will stick more closely to the facts and to the truth, and not tell tales than does this imaginative writer in the Courier-Citizen.

ANGER HURTS HEALTH

BY DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Have you ever been guilty of a fit of anger and abuse against fellow wife, if she should happen to be a little late serving dinner? The consequences of such action are far-reaching, much more so than generally supposed.

The eyes and eyebrows contract, the eyes seem to flash fire, something rises in your pharynx, you try to swallow it and can't, hoarse angry words cause you to cough and produce a throat irritation which increases your anger, your heart-beat quickens, your face flushes, the teeth are clenched and the nostrils distended. And to cap the climax your wife faints or lights and you are so upset that you can't eat.

Without a doubt a distinct shortening of your life span, terrible strain on your nervous system, and intense claudication action that weakens your digestive powers, resulting in toxic influences, that affect the blood stream to a marked degree. It is indeed bad enough, if you are a real healthy animal, to let anger disrupt your physical health and peace of mind. But if you have begun to handicap along the artery route, that becomes a danger to your life, and a complex paralysis from a cerebral hemorrhage. Anger is a sure sign of weakness. The facial expression assumes the mark of frequent fits of anger, and you cannot hide it. The mind is so often affected that real insanity comes as a result not infrequently.

Outbreaks of this sort, or at any other time and place for that matter, are perilous to your mental health and efficiency. The breakdown of mental and physical health in brain organizations

WILL REPEAT "FOLLIES AND FROLICS OF 1924"

The "Follies and Frolics of 1924" to be presented for the second time tomorrow night in the Memorial Auditorium, is one of the best productions of the musical comedy type ever witnessed by a local audience. This is the consensus of opinion of the critics who attended the first performance, and the Matthews are slated at succeeding so well in their efforts to amuse.

Prospects for an even more satisfactory performance tomorrow are bright. Andrus and Louise Carr's ballroom show every member of the original cast has agreed to appear. In the second show the program will be unchanged, and the energies of all concerned will be centered on the task of improving the production in every possible way. The costumes, stage settings and lighting effects, particularly brilliant in the "Follies and Frolics," will be repeated faithfully.

George Sullivan, Tom Murphy, Al Brown, Charles Clancy, Gene Mullin and Dan Brennan—six of the funniest men who have appeared in minstrelsy locally—will repeat their successes in the singing and dancing line, but will have a new stock of jokes and pantomime. Miss Sadie Sheehan and Horatio B. Leggat, the only male singers on the program, will be heard in the same or equally well chosen selections. The applause of more than usual ability is always rapid and deafening under the continued attacks of anger.

Anger is a sure sign of weakness. The facial expression assumes the mark of frequent fits of anger, and you cannot hide it. The mind is so often affected that real insanity comes as a result not infrequently.

Avoid the visits of any anger "germs" and remember that good health waits on good appetites and good cheer.

lowing their solos last week evidenced keen enjoyment of their artists.

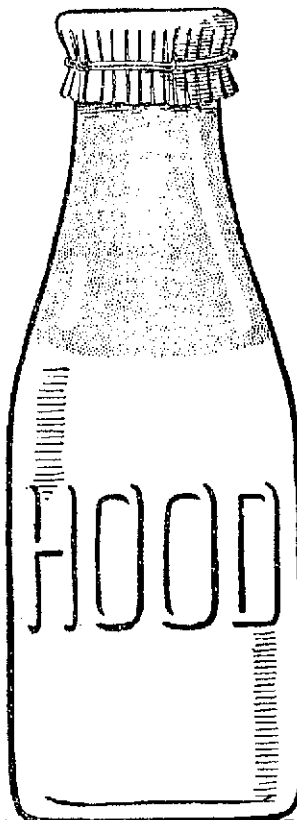

"The Five of Us"—Misses Peggy and Blanche O'Reilly, Miss Dorothy Nolan, Jack Brady and John Goggin—offer a vaudeville specialty that is the last word in novelty and versatility. At the first show their singing, dancing and instrumental tidbits caused much favorable comment. Miss May Conway with song and dance her way into the hearts of her audience, as usual. The clever little girl has selected some particularly characteristic numbers for the "Follies and Frolics" program. Eddie Donahue and Johnny Hall present their customary high class act and at the first performance were forced to respond to a number of encores, literally stopping the show. Andrus and Louise Carr's ballroom specialty reveals a juvenile dancing team without a peer and their repertory seems inexhaustible. Their specialty is one of the best on the program. Mrs. Alice Edson Angelo's character songs are among the best she has sung to date and impressed her auditors with her extraordinary gifts in the line of entertainment.

Miss Alice Deery, Dorothy Nolan, Mabel H. Cox and Madeline McLaughlin, singing, leads who are assisted by attractive dancing groups—have lived in and well contrasted specialties which round out the program in splendid fashion. These young ladies possess great ability of a high order which in conjunction with their personality and the gorgeous costumes of their sketches, makes their part of the performance, conspicuous indeed. Charles J. Keyes makes the most of an excellent opportunity as the lead of the Hawaiian sketch, and in the "Honeymooners" his duel with Miss Sadie Sheehan is a musical treat. Tickets for Tuesday night's performance are going fast and may be secured from members or at stores throughout the city listed elsewhere.

Taking out a peach stain is almost fun!

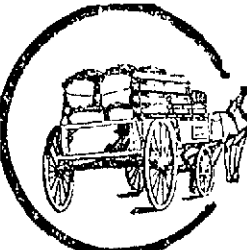

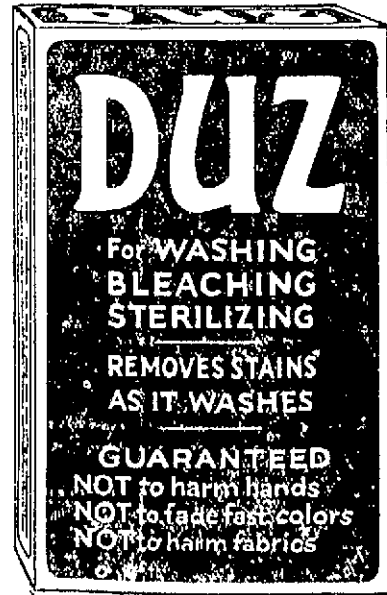

It's as easy for DUZ to take a peach stain out as it was for the peach to put the stain in!

All stains except rust—all yellowness too—vanish from the clothes while DUZ is washing them.

Just wash the clothes in DUZ—the stains and yellowness go out and the strength and quality of the fabric stay in! DUZ washes everything and injures nothing—it's as safe for sheer silks as it is for sturdy cottons.

One ten-cent box of this new soap preparation will show you how to get the stains and yellowness out of the wash—and the hard work and long hours out of washday.

Feminine Touch Offered By White Collar and Cuffs on Dark Dress

TWO COMBINATIONS OF COLLARS AND CUFFS AND (ABOVE) SKETCHES OF THREE OTHER DESIGNS

BY MARIAN HALE
N.E.A. Service Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—One of the most effective ways to inject a little new life and pep into the blue serge or black crepe dress, that has done service since last fall, is to invest in some smart collars and cuffs.

These offer a pleasant compromise between one's inclinations for spring clothes and the necessity for winter wear.

They also create that impression of femininity which works such wonders with the masculine sex.

Some of the newest collars are arranged on net blouse foundations, so that the inconvenience of busting it to the frock is obviated. Smart collars for the round neckline come close about the neck and do not need to be fastened to the frock, as the neckline of the frock is entirely covered by the collar.

There are detachable puffs or ruffles that may be fastened inside the short sleeve to make it practically any length. And there are wide turn-back cuffs that make any stop you desire between the wrist and the elbow.

White crepe de chine or satin models are frequently made quite plain with only pleating, buttons or bows stitching for trimming. Those of net or batiste are frequently embellished with one or many kinds of lace and tucks, ruffles, pleating or what not.

With the flannel or jersey frock, sets of white or cream linen, with a variation of the Peter Pan collar and wide, rather close cuffs, are popular. These are undeniably the most youthful accessories in which any woman may invest.

Besides collars and gilets of white are many others of delicate or brilliant-hued organdie, striped or checked gingham that give a little more service before they go to the laundry and also add the touch of color so much in vogue now.

LOOK AGAIN, PEBBLES

If you have been passing up dainty ankles to view the latest styles in bobbed hair, you'll just have to revert your attention to the shapely supports. In fact, woman has devised a means to draw your eyes to her ankles, at the same time keeping her feet warm. It's a pair of anklets, importations from France.

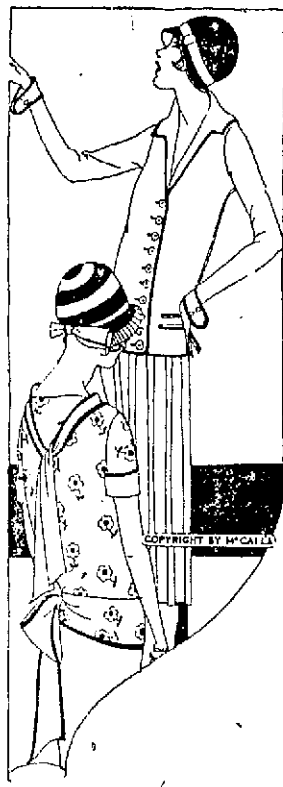

TRENCH WARFARE IS MEXICAN FUSS

JUST A FEW OF HIS 28 CHILDREN!

Lee C. Gentle of Atlanta, Ga., has been "buying shoes for baby" for nearly 40 years. The Gentles have 28 children. Eleven are shown here with them. There never have been twins or triplets—all came singly.

TAILORED IN FLANNEL

Tailored flannel blouses for sport wear are of all colors, with perhaps a special popularity for a light soft green which goes by various names. The tailored blouse sketched is especially smart because of its buttoned front opening, slit pockets and slightly fitted lines.

Blouses intended for dress wear are of heavy silks, frequently figured, and show such charming variations as the narrow collar, turning into ties in back. A wide belt and sash add to the graceful lines of this blouse.

Jack Daw's Adventures. Chapter 4

"Well, who are you?" asked Jack. "And what cave are you inviting me to enter?" "The famous Cave of the Winds," came the reply, "and I am old North Wind himself. I'm the fellow who is making all this wind out here in the open. I only rest and stop blowing when I'm inside the cave."

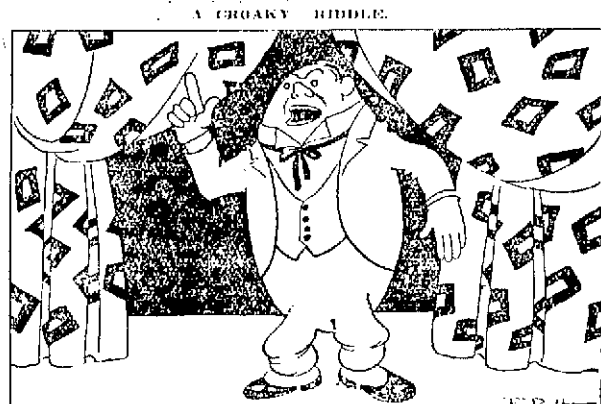

As North Wind spoke, it seemed to blow harder than ever, and Jack again started to whine. Jack knew that his dog was old so he decided to go into the big cave. "Where is the entrance to your cave?" he asked. "Look behind you!" shouted North Wind. Jack did, and saw a big opening.

"Why, that opening wasn't there a minute ago," said the little adventurer. "Certainly not," replied North Wind. "That entrance only opens when I blow it open. And after we get inside, I'll blow it shut and you will be out of the wind." So Jack and Flip and North Wind entered. (Continued.)

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

"QUIET NOW, PLEASE!" CALLED OUT HUMPHY DUMPTY COMPOUSLY. "Another riddle! Another riddle!" cried everybody in Riddle Land.

"Here comes the Riddle Lady!" Nancy made a curtsy and Nick made a bow and everybody else did the same. Oh, but they did like the Riddle Lady—everybody did!

"Quiet now, please!" called out Humphy Dumpty pompously. "The Riddle Lady has a new riddle to guess."

So she began at once so as not to keep them waiting.

"Kerchunk! Kerchunk! In your little green sack. So neatly buttoned straight up your back.

With little black buttons like little black pills. Over your little green tucker with little white frills.

"Chugalong! Chugalong!" With your pocket round and round as you look for flies. In your waterproof bottles and stockings to match.

And a bit on your chin the crumbs to catch!

"Chumpalump! Chumpalump! Your tongue's a queer thing. It goes like a riddle with a very loose string. Though it's not good for music, it's fine for a spoon."

CHICAGO

BY GEORGE BRITT

N. E. A. Service Writer

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—What's the matter with the man in this town? You may ask it you spend 10 minutes waiting under the canopy of a downtown movie castle.

The youth who takes his girl to the movies isn't as faithful as he used to be. He lets her go alone.

At least two-thirds of the arrivals are women, coming by taxi and through the course of 10 minutes are driven up alone in taxicabs.

Hardbaked terra cotta has blossomed as an oasis for the gladdening of a young couple in a fashionable honeymoon apartment.

Their dining room window faced a vista of horizon, grimy wall, a depressing sight.

"Nothing easier," said the sign painter to whom they appealed. And he laid on a garden, 10 feet wide, a marvelous pattern of hollyhocks and chrysanthemums, orchids and edelweiss, bordered by a strip of evergreen grass.

Here's a story of the city streets which can be localized anywhere.

A woman who parked her car in front of a Main street drygoods emporium found a police tag on it when she came out. She paid her fine but kept the tag.

The next time she parked in the same forbidden territory and put the tag back on the car. Policemen observed that the traffic violation was properly attended to and left it alone.

The woman played the game the next day and the next, still apparently a success.

Dogs are the worst toppers of all animals, not excepting the horses who used to drink beer while waiting for their driver at the saloon door. This is the discovery of Dr. Bert Franklin, Chicago veterinarian.

"A dog will come back for more whenever you hold out the spoon, whether it's straight whiskey or mixed with cod liver oil," says Dr. Franklin. "But cats make just as much of a fuss the twentieth time they take it as the first."

Why, that opening wasn't there a minute ago," said the little adventurer. "Certainly not," replied North Wind. "That entrance only opens when I blow it open. And after we get inside, I'll blow it shut and you will be out of the wind." So Jack and Flip and North Wind entered. (Continued.)

ANNIVERSARY

LOWELL DISTRICT COURT

Lowell Council of Boy Scouts
to Hold Big Public Meeting
Friday Night

Judge Enright Had Big Monday Morning Docket to Dispose of Today

Beginning next Friday evening, February 8, Lowell council, Boy Scouts of America, will hold in the national observance of Boy Scout anniversary week, which will extend through Thursday, the 14th. This year marks the 14th anniversary of the incorporation of the organization and Lowell council, with its 21 troops and 625 members is planning to enter heartily into the observance.

The launching of anniversary week will take place at the public meeting to be held in Liberty hall, Memorial Auditorium, Friday evening at 7:45 o'clock, at which Mayor John J. Donovan, all members of the city council and other prominent citizens will be present.

Edwin J. Moffet, Lowell Scout executive.

become honorary members of Lowell council and will be presented pins of their rank by delegates from all of the local troops.

Edwin J. Moffet, Lowell Scout executive, is in charge of the anniversary week plans and has arranged a most attractive and interesting program. The speakers at the Friday night meeting will include Mayor John J. Donovan, Hugh J. Moffet, superintendent of schools, and Dr. John J. Lambert, president of Lowell council. It is expected that upwards of 400 scouts, representing the 21 local troops, will be present at the meeting, all in approved Scout uniform. The meeting will be public and all interested are urged to attend.

At 8:15 o'clock, in common with similar meetings being held all over the country, Lowell scouts will stand and renew their scouting obligations, which in brief are:

- "On my honor I will do my best:
 - To do my duty to God and country and to obey the Scout law;
 - To help other people at all times;
 - To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.
- This is the same promise or obligation to be taken by the public officials and others who are to become honorary members of the organization.

As a special feature of anniversary week, each scout council in the country will conduct a patriotic pilgrimage to the home, birthplace or burial place of some one of the presidents of the United States, or of some American citizen whose name has found a place in the Hall of Fame.

The Lowell council on Saturday will send a delegation of scouts representing each of the local troops, to the burial place of Franklin Pierce, 14th president of the United States, in Concord, N. H. Troops of nearby towns also will join in the pilgrimage and the trip will be made by motor.

Next Monday, the 11th, will be observed in the public schools as Scout day and arrangements are being made for brief exercises. At the high school all boys will be brought together in the Cyrus W. French auditorium and in grammar schools the exercises will be in class rooms.

"My three children as well as myself have taken Father John's Medicine, and we know its value for those who are thin and run down as well as for colds and coughs. I am sure that it has saved me a good deal of expense."—Specialist William Frank, Orono, Maine.

Because of its pure food contents Father John's Medicine builds health and new flesh. It is pure, wholesome food—just what those who are thin and run down need for body building.—Adv.

EAGLES' NOTICE

The next regular meeting of Lowell Aerie will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 5, at 8 o'clock, at the hall, at 8 o'clock, Dr. W. President James H. Gallagher of Haverhill, Mass., will be our guest at this meeting.

A brand new alibi for drunkenness sprung in district court this morning won a five months' sentence for Joseph Baron, who was arrested by Officer McCann Saturday night. The bright cloth in the mill where he worked is too much for his eyes, Baron said, and so took some moonshine as a counter-irritant.

"You'll find dark cloth at the house of correction," was the ominous warning of Judge Enright who was moved to compassion by the pitiful tale of the man's wife. She first exploded his "bright cloth" alibi by saying he hasn't turned a hand to work for six months. Then she told a touching tale of want and privation and their little child ill in the hospital. Even the husband seemed brought to a deeper realization of his duties and on his promise to quit drinking and get his name on a payroll somewhere he was turned over to the probation officer for a year. Sentence of five months was suspended.

The drabness of a dreary morning was never more pronounced in the gray courtroom. Every case seemed to bring out the seamy side of life and emphasize the phase of police work that doesn't come to mind when you see one of the finest swinging jauntily along on his beat.

Karolina Golen, alias Nostek, and Frank Slys were arraigned on statutory charges. "A sad state of affairs," said the court after listening to one of the woman's three children say the defendant had "bought me clothes for a year and is very good to me." The defendants were held in $500 surety each until Saturday morning. In the meantime the police and the probation officer will collaborate in an investigation of all phases of the case.

A mother and son, Julia and Joseph Parlin, were charged with illegal liquor sale and keeping, respectively. A continuance of ten days was granted. Officers Moore, Leach, Bagley, McElroy, Conney and Maloney raided their home in a Fayette street tenement Saturday night, finding twelve gallons of some sort of liquid, 150 empty bottles and two jugs. The mother is alleged to have resisted the intrusion of the officers after an informant is said to have made a purchase from her.

George Morel, for whom justice has been waiting since his place in Chester street was raided some time ago, was arraigned Sunday and upon arraignment today was granted a continuance until Friday morning.

James O'Neil was fined $15 and Victor Carrier and Peter Lynch $10 each, being found guilty of drunkenness. John H. Clark, charged with drunkenness, will be arraigned Thursday.

Paul J. Roane has been added to the clerical force of the purchasing agent's department and began his duties today.

A telephone alarm at 9:20 this morning called fire apparatus to 72 Andrews street where a chimney fire caused but little damage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Collins of 182 Merrimack street have left for a two weeks' pleasure cruise to the West Indies.

As a token of appreciation for voluntary services rendered in connection with the recent successful presentation of the Knights of Columbus musical comedy, "The City of Dreadful Night," the orchestra and chorus will be tendered a testimonial banquet and dance in the council rooms next Wednesday evening.

Rose Maurin's Revue, embracing Hattie Webster and wife, will be at the Empire theatre, Lawrence, the last half of the current week. John Young of this city, formerly of the Lawrence Bag Pipe Band, is one of the party. This act claims Lowell as its home town and hopes to play here later in the season.

The many pupils and friends of Miss Letitia Brown, the well known teacher of piano with a studio at her home on upper Gorham street, will be pleased to know that she is recuperating at the Lowell-Corporation hospital after a serious operation which was performed last week. Miss Brown is well on the road to a speedy recovery and will be pleased to meet her pupils and friends who care to come to the hospital to visit her the latter part of the week.

The condition of Roseman James H. Tracy, who was injured early last week when he fell from the hose wagon while responding to an alarm, is considerably improved. Considerable improvement is also noted in the condition of John C. Phil, auto accident victim, at the same hospital.

Lowell council, 21 troops, all in the city except four which are in Braintree, Chelsea, Haverhill and Tyngsboro. The total membership is about 625. Five new troops now are in the process of formation, three in Lowell and two in Braintree. A troop at Littleton has also made inquiries relative to affiliation with Lowell council. This new scouting program will have membership secondary to training, although it is expected natural growth will occur. Intensive training schedules have been drawn up by Executive Moffet and these will be given preference over membership drives.

INTO HISTORY

Once more we weave a wreath for one of our dead great. Woodrow Wilson has passed. He had touched the spark that makes men live. They bury a corpse within a plot of ground, but they cannot bury a tradition. There will be a Wilson tradition! Some men live in their day and some grow great in perspective. Woodrow Wilson lived in a world beyond his day, and now he will live in a day beyond his death. He started a dream garden of world democracy and peace. He saw it produce weeds of ridicule in some spots and, in others, blades of growing hope. He died for his dream. He broke his body in the fight to spread this gospel. And in nearing the end, he said: "I am a piece of machinery—broken!" Wrinkled had grown the hand that firmly held the war-time helm—wrinkled and paralyzed. The machine was wrecked. But it had done its work.

We mourn him today though Woodrow Wilson's name will live on. Generations yet unborn will write his name large. In his life he came to know well the taste of sorrow. So did Lincoln. He wanted love—the love of his people. In a moment of despair, he cried out to a friend: "I want people to love me, but I suppose they never will." He wanted to be thought human. Yet he saw himself termed an "intellectual machine" and a "maker of lovely phrases," whereupon he turned, almost in tears and asked: "Great God, am I not more than that?" Yes, he was more than that. The muse of history will do full justice to the ideals and achievements and even to the unattained ambitions of Woodrow Wilson.

CHISHOLM-RYAN CASE

BEFORE MASTER

The hearing before Frederic S. Harvey as master in the disagreement between Finlay Chisholm and Albert J. Ryan continued this morning at the Gorham street courthouse. The litigation is the outcome of a dispute in connection with the building of two houses for Mr. Chisholm at Westford and Walker streets by Mr. Ryan as architect.

Early Morning
Automobile Accident

His right eye, he showed little evidence of having been in the accident. His escape, since he is alleged to have been at the driving wheel, is regarded as miraculous.

According to his story of the accident to the police yesterday, being called to a point on Kirk street and slept there Saturday night. Awakening about 3 o'clock in the morning he decided to go to the home of his relatives in Chelsea street. He got into his machine and started home, picking up the three other passengers at various points to take them to their homes.

At a point near Foster street on Westford the snow had gathered on his windshield sufficiently to interfere with clear vision and he reached forward to swing the windshield wiper and clear off the snow, at the same time applying the service brake. As he did so the car lurched from the car tracks and skidded in a semi-circle, the rear end striking a tree. The car continued to plunge forward and came to a stop after striking an electric light pole.

The impact caused Delong to lose consciousness. When he regained his senses he saw Gathrie and McDevitt lying on the car tracks on Westford street and Runkinshaw in the machine with him, bleeding from cuts about the face.

Officer McDonald, Dr. Harold L. Leland and Dr. Marshall L. Alling heard the crash and hurried to the scene. The ambulance and police patrol were summoned and the two seriously injured men rushed to St. John's hospital. The driver of the machine and Runkinshaw were treated by the two doctors, Runkinshaw then being sent to his home and Delong placed under arrest.

The automobile was completely demolished as a result of the smash. The body of the car was torn from the frame, the top collapsed, and the running gear was twisted out of shape. So severe was the impact that every seat cushion was broken.

Gathrie and Delong are employed in the contracting room of the Corcoran-Cutler Co.; Runkinshaw is the well known druggist and McDevitt was employed by Campbell the druggist for many years and recently worked for Fred Howard.

EGYPTIAN SARCOPHAGUS

Great Stone Coffin of King
Tut Exposed for First Time in 3200 Years

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press) For the first time in 3200 years the great stone coffin of Tut-Ankh-Amen stood forth today in all its majesty, shorn of its protective nest of golden shrouds.

The fourth casket proved, in Howard Carter's experienced hands, a less formidable problem than was first surmised, and a few hours' work yesterday sufficed to disengage the sarcophagus. Then it was seen that the casket, carved by the glaziers, obtained four weeks ago of one end of the sarcophagus through the open doors of the enclosing shrines, was justified.

As massive in construction as it is chaste in design and as unadorned by the tooth of time as it is inviolate from the hands of tomb robbers, this graceful stone chest, gleaming pink beneath the sheen of electric lamps, must be acclaimed a unique specimen of the funerary art of the 18th dynasty.

The four crowned goddesses of death, who, in traditional posture, stand at the four corners of the coffin with wings outspread to shield the dead monarch from the forces of evil, are holly and deeply incised—full-breasted, with slender arms and powerfully winged, each with one hand grasping the "ankh" or key of life, which figures in the dead Pharaoh's name. The lid is massively solid and inscribed in bands with lines of hieroglyphics.

The sarcophagus is thought to be even heavier than the massive coffin of Haremhotep in an adjoining tomb, which is of a fine specimen of 18th dynasty sculpture, roughly six feet high, five broad and seven long.

It was an emotional moment for the excavators when they first gazed upon this royal coffin, unseen by mortals since the undertakers of ancient Thebes set about their long, difficult task of enclosing the sarcophagus in their ornate, florid casings.

WILL REAPPOINT E. W. TRULL CLERK OF DISTRICT COURT

Five-Year Term Expires on Feb. 23—Succeeded James F. Savage in 1919 When He Retired For Age—Active in Court Work Over Quarter Century

Edward W. Trull, clerk of the Lowell district court, will complete his five-year term of office on Feb. 23 next. When President Calvin Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts, he appointed Mr. Trull as clerk of court to succeed James F. Savage, who severed his connections with the court on Feb. 23, 1919, under the retirement law. Charles Trull's appointment took effect on Feb. 23 at midnight. He has served efficiently since that time, and this morning received a wire from the state house that he will be reappointed at the expiration of his present term.

Clerk Trull has been actively identified with local court circles since July 19, 1888, when he entered the office as assistant to Clerk Savage. He was made assistant clerk in Jan. 1889. At that time, the Market street building was known as the Lowell police court, being changed to a district court by a legislative act on August 23, 1921.

During his incumbency, Mr. Trull has appointed three assistant clerks, subject to the approval of the court justice. On March 10, 1919, William J. Carroll resigned a position in the United States revenue service to take the position. He resigned on June 24, 1920, to go back to his former position. The second appointee was George P. Toye, who assumed his duties on July 8, 1920, and who resigned on October 31, 1922, to resume the practice of law.

The present assistant clerk is Raymond P. Bourgeois, who succeeded Mr. Toye, by appointment, on November 1, 1922.

Just when all but the last faint spark of hope had been abandoned, the weather man headed the wisest of Lowell's winter carnival committee, and the Sabbath morn found the streets well covered with snow, and a strong flurry in progress. Not enough snow fell during the day to make the carnival a surety, yet hopes were re-born and the enthusiastic carnival boosters, who plan to start their stunts starts Wednesday, rejoiced when again this morning they found the skies had loosened more snow and promised to do a generous job.

Saturday, with the carnival but four days away, things looked pretty blue and it seemed almost certain that the carnival would meet with postponement. The program for the two day carnival, which ends with the knockout ball at the Auditorium Thursday night and the selection of a king and queen is complete in every detail. There will be horse races, a football game in the snow, skiing events, skating races and everything that makes up an A-1 card.

One of the big features of the carnival will be the exhibition, here at Walden's All-American dog team, which will come down from Wagonville, N. H., for the carnival. Chinook, magnificent lead dog of the Walden team, will lead the group of huskies, Chinook was leader of the team which won the international dog sled derby in 1922 and comes from a strain of fast and powerful dogs.

Just snow and a bit more wintry tangle to the air is all that is needed to make the carnival possible. It's success is certain if weather conditions will only favor it.

Will Attempt to Bring Bert-hold Block Here to Face Larceny Charge

Supt. Atkinson will send a police officer to New York within a day or two in an endeavor to bring back to this city Bert-hold Block, wanted here on a grand larceny charge in connection with several thousand dollars' worth of securities alleged to have been secured of Mrs. Clementine Crossley of Beacon street, in the Inter-City Trust movement.

The superintendent received word from New York yesterday that Block had been taken into custody in that city. He had previously been arrested in Chicago, but successfully fought extradition when Sheriff Philip Dwyer went there to bring him back to Lowell.

WORST STORM OF THE WINTER ARRIVES

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—The worst storm of the winter from many angles swept the country from Minnesota to Texas today. With its centre in Missouri, steel and wind played havoc with communications and colder weather set in in the northwest. Many cities and towns were isolated by sleet-burdened wires.

The high wind did almost as much damage as sleet and reached a velocity of 48 miles an hour in Chicago and ranged from 35 to 40 miles an hour over much of the other territory affected, which includes Nebraska, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and southward into Texas.

The storm developed in the west last Saturday and has assumed widespread proportions in the middle Mississippi valley, although the situation is clearing up today in western Nebraska.

All telegraph wires failed between Chicago and Milwaukee and in northern Wisconsin a large strip of territory was isolated.

The coldest weather in the northwest is due to a cold wave pushing southward from Canada but it is of limited proportions, according to weather reports. Another cold wave has been sighted in Alaska, but it is several days distant from the United States and too far away for weather forecasters to predict what its effect may be.

MATRIMONIAL

Mr. Francis Dziurkiewicz of Chicago, Ill., and Miss Mary E. Stankiewicz of Billerica, were married yesterday afternoon by Rev. J. F. Lesinski, pastor of the Polish National Catholic church in Lakewood avenue. The bride's parents, 123 Bankway road, Billerica, were attended by the Misses Joanna Dziurkiewicz and Josephine Stankiewicz as bridesmaids and Messrs. John Stankiewicz and Anthony Dziurkiewicz as best men. The bride wore a gown of white satin and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. A reception was held at the bride's parents' home.

The couple left on an extended wedding trip to Chicago and upon their return will live in this city.

Simple Funeral For Woodrow Wilson

OPERA HOUSE THREATENED BY FIRE IN TAILOR SHOP NEXT DOOR

Tenants in Flats Overhead Carried to Safety—Veritable Fog Blankets Opera House Halting High School Play—Audience of 1200 Reaches Street

Over 1200 persons in the Lowell Opera House, attending the first performance of the high school play, "The Hoochman," were forced to flee to the streets for safety just before a cinder block this afternoon when the building was stepped in smoke from a disastrous fire which broke out in the Victor tailor shop, adjacent.

The play had been in progress but 15 minutes when smoke rolled into the building like a heavy fog at sea. Folks hurriedly grabbed for their wraps, overcoats and umbrellas being left in the hurried exit, and made their way to safety.

A brick fire wall saved the theatre from being caught by the blaze, the origin of which is undetermined.

In responding to the alarm, one of the horses attached to the big ladder truck from central headquarters lost his footing on the slippery surface of Central street, opposite the Strand theatre, and fell to the ground. He was not injured.

Central street was jammed with thousands, players and folks who rushed to the scene when the general alarm was sounded. The building, which is owned by Tom Hennessey, is a frame structure and the blaze took it as though it was a tinderbox. The flames mounted high in the air, being plainly discernible from Merrimack street.

Frantic parents rushed to the scene in autos and taxicabs and the crowd grew in proportion as the fire gained in its spread. The firemen, mounted on the Opera House roof and other points of vantage, poured tons of water upon the building.

The tailor shop building has tenements overhead and persons were rushed out to safety while near the point of suffocation. Not sure that all were out, the firemen did valiant work in going through the buildings, searching every room. The smoke was so thick that the work was greatly hampered. The flames crept on steadily and for a while it seemed that the Opera House must fall prey to the blaze.

POSTOFFICE BUSINESS LAST YEAR BREAKS ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS

Postmaster Says 1924 Will Not Be So Good Due to Loss of Telephone Company's Business—Needed $3500 More Gross to Win Pay Raise and More Help

The local postoffice did more business during the year 1923 than ever before in its history, despite the fact that 1923 was not a good business year. The total revenue of the office was within $3500 of the amount necessary to advance it into the $300,000-$400,000 class.

The rating of postoffices is decided upon by the amount of revenue received in a year. The local office is at the present time in the $250,000-$300,000 class. If the revenue for 1923 had been $3500 more the supervisory officials of the office would have been

SEN. LODGE PAYS TRIBUTE

Joins With Sen. Robinson in Senate Eulogies of Former President

Declares Wilson Was Man of Remarkable Ability and Sound Character

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Congress put aside today the bitter partisan debate which has held forth there in recent days, out of respect for the memory of Woodrow Wilson.

Both houses met at noon as usual, but it was only so that their leaders, of all shades of political opinion, might pay tribute to the fallen chief and pass resolutions commensurate with his services to the nation.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the republican leader and one of Mr. Wilson's most uncompromising political foes, joined with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, in the senate eulogies of the former president.

"In sympathy and sorrow, and with every mark of homage," said Senator Lodge, "we stand with bowed heads in solemn recognition of this event, at once sad and momentous, which has thus come upon us in the wisdom of the overruling Providence that guides the destinies of mankind."

The republican leader said republican senators had heard with profound sorrow the announcement of Mr. Wilson's death.

"In common with all the people of this country," he said, "we have felt a very deep sympathy for the sufferings of President Wilson during his long illness, which he has borne with out complaint and with so much fortitude."

"Mr. Wilson was a man of remarkable ability, and of strong character."

Tewksbury Voters Want Lower Taxes—Extra Money for Schools Refused

Economy was the watchword at the gathering of more than 250 Tewksbury taxpayers, who met at 3 o'clock this morning in the town hall, Tewksbury Centre, to discuss many important community affairs, also to elect officers for the coming year and appropriate moneys for carrying on the town's varied business.

With a rising tax rate last year that led to much later dimension and criticism, the taxpayers gathered today appeared to be prepared for the most part to go slow on approving money appropriation in 1924 for anything except what is absolutely needed to carry on the town's regular business affairs.

The voters resolved early in the day to play the economy system to the limit. A bid for a new tractor to help the winter snow-fighting brigades was turned down after a long but lively debate. The sum of between $4500 and $5000 had been asked for.

Former President Passed From Life While He Slept in Prayerful Quiet of Sunday Morning

WOODROW WILSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press) Woodrow Wilson has found in eternity a haven from the storms and sorrows of a troubled world. In the prayerful quiet of a Sunday morning, death folded him gently in its embrace and bore him to his Maker.

He passed from life while he slept, with those he loved best close about him. His broken body had weakened little by little until the last spark of his vitality went out. But his spirit was supported to the last by the indomitable courage of the old fighting days. In his last wakeful moments, he told his loved ones that he knew the end had come, and was ready.

The Gilday Gown Shop

In New Home Today
Marks Bldg., 49 Central St.

While the carpenters and decorators were putting the final touches yesterday on the new Gilday quarters, busy hands were unpacking and arranging tastefully, the newly arrived New York Spring fashions, fresh and crisp from their tissue wrappings. By this morning everything was in readiness, and the collections of lovely dresses were winning favorable comment and outspoken admiration. Many selections were made by enthusiastic patrons.

The new Gilday quarters are somewhat smaller than occupied in the old store, but this upstairs Shop is not only a more convenient location, but also allows overhead costs to be reduced materially. The attractive price tag on the garments must surely appeal and convince patrons that all sales will be made on very close margins.

The easy stairway and interior of the new premises are arranged so as to conduct the business efficiently with every comfort and convenience, and a pleasant and quiet atmosphere. The decorations are very attractive, yet simple and free from extravagance. The general color scheme of ivory and rose harmonizes throughout, and proves most pleasing to the eye.

This (ten years young) firm should prosper and continue to merit the continued goodwill of its many loyal patrons.

LULL IN OIL PROBE, TRIBUTE TO WILSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Congress today stilled the turmoil over the leasing of the naval oil reserves to pay its tribute to Woodrow Wilson.

The senate oil investigation commission, whose authority to question him further under the resolution authorizing the inquiry, was challenged Saturday by Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior at the time the oil leases were arranged, will not meet until tomorrow. It had decided to ask the senate for redaction of the resolution today but this plan necessarily was changed and leaders of the inquiry announced that the session called for tomorrow would be a brief one, adjourning to await action on its request for renewal of its authority.

FUNERAL SERVICES WILL BE HELD WEDNESDAY

War-Time President Will Sleep for a Time in Stone Vault Within Great Cathedral Rising on Hills That Look Down Over Washington—Claims of Nation to Show Him Lavish Honors Must Be Denied—Funeral Wednesday Will Be As Simple As Last Years of Life—Tributes From All Parts of World—Friends and Foes Join in Unstinted Eulogies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. (By the Associated Press)—Woodrow Wilson will sleep for a time in a stone vault within the great cathedral rising on the hills that look down over Washington from the westward. And while he rests there, men who acclaim his memory will take counsel together as to the manner and place of his last sepulchre.

The hard decision was made today by those who loved him best. Word came from Dr. Grayson, as friend and spokesman for the sorrowing widow and family, that the claims of the nation to show him lavish honors, must be denied. His funeral next Wednesday will be as simple as his last years of life.

Tributes from Friend and Foe

While this plan was in the making, a great tide of tribute to his courageous spirit and lofty purposes was rolling in from around the world. His death had loosed men's tongues to speak their admiration even as it stifled the already dimming clamor of criticism that beat about him when his hands still firmly gripped the powers of the presidency. From friend and foe in the harsh days of the post and from those who still oppose some of the tenets of his faith, came generous, unstinted tribute to the high idealism that had ruled the heart and mind of him whose death they mourned.

Great American Is Dead

A great American is dead, and in death the bickering and tragedies of misunderstanding and cross purposes have been swept away in a flood of tribute to his greatness of heart and to his service to his country in its hour of sorry trial.

Messages of sympathy poured in on Mrs. Wilson from every foreign capital. They rang with something of the spirit that had ruled among the allied

EARLY MORNING AUTO ACCIDENT IN WESTFORD STREET

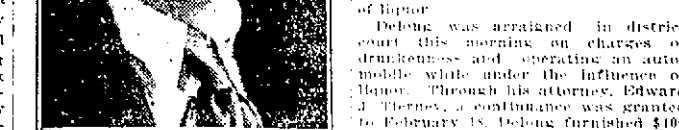

Walter F. McDermott of Wilder Street on Danger List at Hospital—Daniel Guthrie Seriously Injured—Driver of Car Arraigned on Drunkenness Charge

As a result of an automobile accident which occurred on Westford street early yesterday morning, Walter F. McDermott of 537 Wilder street is at St. John's hospital suffering from injuries that it is believed will prove fatal. His name is on the danger list. Daniel F. Guthrie of 182 Pine street is at the same hospital suffering from numerous injuries to his head. Harold M. DeLong of 25 Marlborough street, the two other occupants of the machine, escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred at 6:20 o'clock yesterday morning on Westford street near Foster. DeLong is the owner of the machine and was driving it at the time of the accident. He was looked at by the police station following the smashup, charged with driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

DeLong was arraigned in district court this morning on charges of drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Through his attorney, Edward J. Tierney, a continuance was granted to February 18. DeLong furnished $100 surety. Except for a slight cut over

"MADAME BUTTERFLY" TO BE PRESENTED HERE

Colin O'More, the brilliant young American, is to appear in this season as a star in the dramatic production of the opera, "Madame Butterfly," to be given here by Fortune Galle's famous San Carlo Grand Opera company on Feb. 18 at the Auditorium. A path that has been fraught with hardships and many bitter disappointments, beginning life in a small western town, the son of a physician, he showed an early leaning toward a musical career by his fondness for the piano when still a child. At sixteen he was sent to the Cincinnati College of Music, to study this instrument, but before long his vocal gifts became apparent, and the last three years of the college were devoted almost entirely to the voice. At twenty-one he was graduated in both voice and piano, during this early period he also brought forth several compositions.

The opportunity to study with the great tenor, Jean de Reszke, now loomed large before him and during the next three years we find O'More in Paris studying opera and the art of the master. As a direct result of this, O'More has been placed in the front rank as a singer of French chansons, his diction and phrasing being considered by such eminent authorities as Edmond Clement, Mme. Gertrude Le Blanc and Dame Nellie Melba, as among the finest on the concert platform today.

Mr. O'More now left de Reszke and went to Italy to study the Italian language, and incidentally to make his operatic debut, as it afterwards turned out. A year passed, and then he went to London, where he gave his first recital and filled many engagements.

"BLESSED WITH PERFECT HEALTH BY INTERNAL BATHING"

Miss Emma F. de Merritt of 615 12th St., Sacramento, Cal., writes to the Tyrrill Hygienic Institute of New York:

"Since using the 'J. B. L. Canada' I can do things I would not have attempted before. I do not feel tired or worn out and that awful heavy feeling has entirely disappeared from my head. I cleanse the lower intestine its entire length and keep it always free of poisonous waste.

Thousands testify that Constipation, Indigestion, Stomach Troubles, Headaches, Rheumatisms and all the many serious troubles which they cause are absolutely relieved and prevented by this Natural Treatment.

We will gladly explain to you the simple operation of the 'J. B. L. Canada,' why it is so certain in its results, and will give you free of cost, an interesting little book containing the results of the experience of Dr. Chas. A. ments in the homes of prominent people, having always been of the lyric type and with a decided leaning for the songs of Ireland. Mr. O'More devoted much time and study to the music of Ireland, its history and folklore, cultivating the acquaintance of the foremost authorities and setting many of the better known lyrics to accompaniments of his own, such as the "Minneloo," "Kathleen O'More" and "The Dear Little Shamrock."

It must be borne in mind that during all this time Mr. O'More was struggling with an adverse fate that seemed to pursue him everywhere, bitter and disappointing were the disappointments that he met, and often it seemed as though success would never come. He is an artist, however, who realizes the endless possibilities of his chosen profession, and though it seemed at times as if it were impossible to make further progress, a will that would not be downed drove him on to the better days that were to come. For this reason he is a splendid example and inspiration for the aspiring musical student to follow.

Returning to America, O'More continued his vocal studies with the noted teacher, William V. Ziegler. Mr. O'More gave his first American recital in Acadian Hall. In reviews of this concert by the late H. E. Krehbiel and Sylvester Rawlings, he was compared favorably with the great tenors, Cleon and McCormack. Spurred on by this success, he followed with three recitals in Carnegie Hall, during the past season, all before packed houses, followed by concerts in many of the larger eastern cities. At the conclusion of the season he was engaged by Fortune Galle of the San Carlo opera, as stated above.

Seats are now on sale at Chalfoux's.

CLAIM OF POSTAL CLERKS FOR HIGHER WAGES

If only as a means for the preservation of the morale and esprit d'corps of the postal department, a wage raise is justified in the opinion of Senator David I. Walsh, junior senator from Massachusetts. Speaking on the subject before the senate, Mr. Walsh pointed out that demoralization is now threatened, and said: "Only a fine spirit of public service and the conviction that congress would soon redress the present inequity salaries has prevented a condition developing which would seriously cripple the postal service."

"As it is, the labor turnover in the clerical branch of this service is larger than in any other branch of the government."

"The postal carrier has to face all kinds of weather, bear the consequences of being charged with an important trust, and endure the physical strain of carrying a heavy pack while traveling his route day after day, year in and year out. For all this the postal service pays a minimum of $26.92 and a maximum of $34.01 per week after three years. These salaries make it increasingly difficult to recruit capable postal employees. We cannot afford to let the postal service deteriorate, for delay, inefficiency and

Commander Colin Macdonald of Lowell Post, 87, of the American Legion, announced last night that in conjunction with the movement being made all over the country by means of a meeting of the legion in this city would be held tonight to discuss plans for securing the support of the general public in the fight against the big, financial organizations that are fighting to prevent the passage of friendly legislation.

He declared that the American Legion is holding its own in the fight going on in Washington as to the present time, in spite of the fact that many corporations in this country are requesting their employees to send in letters protesting the passage of the bill.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held tonight at 7.15, followed by a regular meeting of the post at 8 o'clock, at which the question will be discussed.

carelessness in this service are ruinous.

"The very efficient postmaster of Boston, Mr. Roland M. Baker, recently made an investigation as to the cost of living for a postal employee with a small family—not over four persons. The result of that investigation shows that the monthly expenditures amounted to $203, while the maximum salary is $150 per month."

The Kelly bill, known as H.R. 4123, provides for revision to the following scale: First grade, $250; second grade, $220; third grade, $200; first grade special clerk, $250; second grade special clerk, $200; substitute clerk, 80 cents an hour. Here are a few of the reasons cited by the postal employees in support of their claims for more money:

1.—The postoffice employees are skilled workers rendering services vitally necessary to the public.

2.—Their pay, almost entirely, comes from postal service earnings and not from taxation.

3.—Postal service earnings are greatly curtailed because rates of postage, which are in reality postal labor costs, have remained stationary during a period when other costs have soared.

4.—The two-cent stamp of today buys more service (labor) for postal patrons than forty years ago. A unique record in these days of soaring labor costs.

5.—Postal employees are justly entitled to share in their greater productivity. To deny them this right is to insult the government as an employer.

6.—There is a larger labor turnover in the clerical branch of the postal service than any other branch of government employment, due largely to unattractive wage and workday standards.

7.—The wage of the postoffice employee should insure him:

(a) Comfortable living quarters,

(b) Good, healthful food with an occasional chance to enjoy delicacies,

(c) Enough good clothing for most purposes,

(d) The chance for the wife to buy enough mechanical and physical aid to relieve housework of much of its drudgery,

(e) The means to buy books, go to the theatre, and give the children adequate education,

(f) At least a limited amount of recreation,

(g) Some insurance and a little fund of savings,

(h) Low wages are more costly than high wages. A high standard of postal pay means a more dependable postal service, the value of which cannot be calculated. Higher postal pay, therefore, is a sound investment for the American people.

CATHOLIC CHURCH NEWS

Blessing of Throats Yesterday in Observance of Feast of St. Blaise

The blessing of throats in observance of the Feast of St. Blaise took place in the Catholic churches of the city yesterday. This feast annually follows Candlemas, the throats of the faithful being blessed with candles dedicated the previous day.

In St. Patrick's church yesterday, the blessing of throats took place after each mass. It was announced that the university extension course in oral English and parliamentary law will begin tomorrow evening, the candidates to meet in the hall of St. Patrick's school at 8 o'clock. The class will be in charge of Mrs. Elizabeth J. McNamara of Cambridge who is working under the direction of the state department of education.

Next Thursday evening at 7.30 o'clock holy hour service will be held.

The Holy Rosary sodality of the Immaculate Conception church received communion at the 8 o'clock mass yesterday. The high mass at 11 o'clock was celebrated by Rev. John Duffy, O.M.I., while the sermon was delivered by Rev. William A. Robbins, O.M.I.

Very Rev. Daniel J. Keleher, O.M.I., was the celebrant of the 7.30 o'clock mass in St. Peter's church yesterday, at which members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. The blessing of throats took place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8.30 o'clock in the evening.

The regular meeting of the Married Ladies' sodality will be held Wednesday evening of this week at 7.30 o'clock.

The Holy Rosary sodality of the Church of the Sacred Heart received communion in that church at the 7.30 o'clock mass yesterday. The newly augmented church choir sang impressively at the high mass.

There will be a special meeting of the Holy Rosary sodality, Wednesday evening. A social will be held under the auspices of this sodality at a date to be announced later.

The musical show of the Sacred Heart Social club will be held on Feb. 23 in the school hall.

The new St. Michael's school in Sixth street was open to public inspection yesterday afternoon and was visited by many admiring parishioners.

St. Michael's Charity guild, Rev. Jas. F. Lynch, spiritual director, will meet tomorrow evening at 7.30 o'clock. Confession for the public school girls will be held next Saturday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. They will receive communion at the 8 o'clock mass next Sunday.

At the high mass yesterday, Rev. Augustus G. Madden delivered a powerful sermon on "The Power of God." The St. Blaise blessing was given yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The blessing of St. Blaise was administered in St. Margaret's church at 7 o'clock last night. Regular order of services was observed in the morning, the mass being celebrated by Rev. William P. Brennan, Rev. Andrew P. O'Brien and the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Gintanton.

The pastor, Rev. John J. Powers, celebrated the 7 and 8.30 o'clock masses in St. Columba's. The 10 and 11 o'clock masses were celebrated by Rev. Cornelius J. Cotton. The blessing of throats took place at 7.30 in the afternoon and at the conclusion of benediction in the evening.

Holy hour services will be held Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

At the 7.30 o'clock mass at St. Joseph's church yesterday morning which was celebrated by Rev. Armand Baron, O.M.I., the members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. Rev. Fr. Baron also delivered the sermon at this and at the 9 and 10.30 o'clock masses. He discussed at length the authority of the church in its law-making, explaining the various degrees and the obligation on the part of the faithful to obey them. Rev. Louis A. Nolin, O.M.I., celebrated the 8 o'clock mass and also sang the high mass at 10.30 o'clock.

OLD HOME TOWN

THE KNIGHTS OF SIR GALAHAD

"The Boy and the Church" was the subject of the address by P. W. Lincoln at St. Anne's church last evening.

The talk was given in connection with the organization of the Knights of Sir Galahad, an order which it is proposed to form among the boys of the church. He stated that in 130 of the 200 parishes of which he is the boys' work director, the Sir Galahad movement has been organized and proved successful by giving the boys an ideal to work for, instilling religion into their lives and giving them a wholesome outlook on life. The boys need the church and the church needs the boys and the movement is founded to give them something of their own.

The regular service was conducted by Rev. Appleton Gramis, assisted by Rev. P. S. Beattie. Several violin solos were played by Alessandro Nicolini, who also assisted the choir and the Guild of St. Cecilia in the services.

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now.

Mrs. Mary Kellie of 132 Boston St., Sisterville, N. Y., was perplexed about her daughter until her own druggist told her they used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at his house, and she did likewise. Miss Irene Mazierska of 90 Peter St., Buffalo, N. Y., is glad her attention was called to Syrup Pepsin.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced.

A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, sores and

"How I Found the True Church," Topic of Address by Boston Man

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Holy Name society of St. Andrew's church, North Billerica, was held last evening in Matthew hall. "How I Found the True Church" was the topic discussed by William B. Kerish of Boston, an interesting and able speaker, who treated his subject in detail, keeping his audience at attention during his entire talk. President Edward M. Quinn presided and also addressed the members.

Rev. John M. Cunningham, spiritual director of the society spoke of the excellent work of the organization and praised its members for their loyalty and spirit of co-operation which had been such a factor in the accomplishments of the society.

The recently elected officers of the society are: President, Edward M. Quinn; vice president, James P. Con-

BURNS PROVED FATAL

Woman Burned in Her Home in Salem Street Dies at Hospital

Miss Nellie Doherty, aged 53 years and crippled, received burns in her home, 218 Salem street, yesterday morning that resulted in her death in the early afternoon at the Lowell Corporation hospital, where she had been removed for treatment.

Miss Doherty lived with her two sisters. While the sisters were at church yesterday morning she attempted to move something on the stove and as a result her clothing caught fire. Her screams roused neighbors in the same house and they broke into the house and found her in the kitchen with her clothing ablaze.

While several neighbors extinguished the flames, the sisters were sent in to the ambulance and fire department and an alarm sounded from box 129. Upon the arrival of the ambulance it was seen that Miss Doherty's injuries were serious and she was removed to the Lowell

Corporation hospital. The fire apparatus arrived at about the same time the ambulance did, but had their run for nothing as the fire had not spread to the building.

Dr. Marshall L. Atling, medical examiner, viewed the body yesterday afternoon and announced that death was due to accidental causes.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Miss Lillian Desmone and William Courneen have the leading roles in "The Divorce Question," timely play to be presented this week by Al Luttering's stock players at the Lowell Opera House. The opening performance will be given tomorrow afternoon, the high school players having the use of the house this afternoon and evening. Tickets may be purchased or reservations made at the box office any time this evening. The advance sale, which started last Wednesday, has been heavy.

Mr. Courneen will play the part of Dopey Rice and the part of his sister, Minnie, will be played by Miss Desmone. Richard Morgan will have the part of the priest and Malcolm MacLeod and Edna Karl Andrews will play the estranged pair. John Rowe will inject the comedy and drama. He has the part of the church caretaker and depicts an old Irishman just brimming with blarney. Back Bay will have a detective's part. Miss Fern Chandler, the ingenue, is well cast.

The play is one of vital interest and importance at this time. It is a serious drama with just enough comedy relief to keep it from becoming too sad.

It is a story that appeals to both men and women alike and teaches a great lesson.

The play is given in one act, the scenery of a little Catholic church. Miss Desmone, daughter of the estranged couple and a sister of Dopey Rice, has a highly emotional role that will bring forth her best talents. Mr. Courneen has played this character before and given a remarkable performance. Miss Desmone plays the part of a shop girl, making her way in life, due solely to the separation of her parents when she was at a tender age. The play has its sad notes, but it also is bright in spots. All in all it sums up as a great contribution to the spoken drama. The Luttering players have rehearsed faithfully under the vigilant eye of Mr. Raymond and are certain to give their usual highly creditable performance.

There will be a special Friday matinee, starting at 2 o'clock. In all this week, choice seats are being disposed of rapidly and phone reservations should be made by those who wish to be certain that they will see the play. The box office phone number is 261.

CAPT. O'HAY TO SPEAK

Davis' "Soldier of Fortune,"

at Luncheon of Chamber of Commerce Feb. 19

Secretary Manager George E. Wells of the chamber of commerce today announced that he has secured Capt. Irving O'Hay, U. S. Army, retired, as speaker for the membership luncheon to be held in Liberty hall on Feb. 19. Capt. O'Hay is a genial, interesting speaker with a great store of personal experience to draw from. He is truly the "Soldier of Fortune" depicted by Richard Harding Davis in the great work of that name by the late novelist. Capt. O'Hay, and you could call him General O'Hay for that matter for he has held the rank too, has had a life crammed full of excitement, fun and adventure. He has been in any number of minor foreign revolutions, has fought for many causes, one of them pretty heavy and indefinite. He has an unimpeachable personality and is the sort that "wears well." His humor is of the wholesome, spontaneous sort that never fails to win his auditors.

Capt. O'Hay has appeared before the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and other large bodies and has never failed to score as a big success.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS IN CHELMSFORD

Lively interest centres today in the annual Chelmsford town election, officers being voted for in the various village precincts to serve during the coming year. The polls were open at 12 o'clock this noon and will remain open until 5 o'clock tonight.

The polling places are as follows: Precinct 1, Centre town hall; precinct 2, North town hall; precinct 3, Historical hall, West Chelmsford; precinct 4, schoolhouse, East Chelmsford.

Three contests on the official ballot are attracting attention in this hottest of recent town election polls. Win. Quigley, present member of the board of assessors, is being opposed by Jas. P. Dunnigan, former incumbent, who desires to come back.

The school committee battle promises to be a warm one also. John McAdams of the Westlands section, Chas. Clough and Henry A. Bunch of the Centre are new candidates. For the health board, Abbot L. Emery, now completing a three-year term, is being opposed by Eliphaz Brown of Westlands.

The pre-election campaign has been the liveliest in the history of Chelmsford from many viewpoints. Mr. Dunnigan, aiming to quash Mr. Quigley's aspirations, has been conducting a very vigorous campaign and, according to reports, had a strong following in his home village. Dunnigan also claims many supporters in the East and West Chelmsfords, and expects to win.

The Quigley forces are not worrying. With three years to his credit and supported by many citizens who have followed his work closely, the candidate for re-election, backed by his loyal followers, is confident of defeating Dunnigan.

The other town officers being voted for in Chelmsford today are as follows: Moderator, Walter Perkins; town clerk, Harold Pettersen; selectman, George Rigby; treasurer and collector of taxes, Ervin W. Wescrover; constable, Fred J. Vinal; library trustee, Albert Davis; A. Heady Park and Lotte L. Snow; park commissioner, Fred L. Fletcher; overseer of the poor, George Rigby.

A meeting of the Chelmsford finance committee will be held this evening at the Centre town hall at 7:30 o'clock to hear any registered voters who are interested in any article in the warrant for the annual town meeting, to be held on Monday, Feb. 11.

WINS TRIP TO NEW YORK

Joseph Smith of 175 Hall street was the winner in the drawing contest at the Associated hall on Saturday night and as a result he will be a member of the party of fifteen to enjoy a trip to New York at the expense of the Associated hall management. Seven other names were drawn before Mr. Smith's was pulled out of the glass jar, all others being absent and consequently ineligible to compete. Miss Ida Bradley was chosen to draw the names.

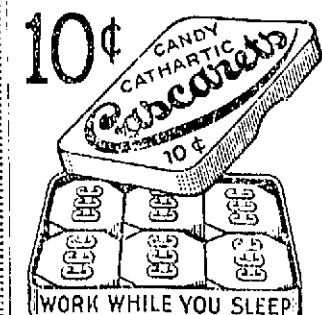

CAUGHT WITH BIG SUPPLY OF LIQUOR

Joseph Regan, a former taxicab driver, was arrested by federal and municipal officers in Lawrence yesterday, charged with violating the liquor law. About 600 bottles of liquor valued at $3500 were seized. The liquor was being trucked to Regan's home at the time it was seized. It bore Canadian government stamps and seals and is believed to have just arrived from the border domain.

TO ANNOUNCE NAME OF PEACE WINNER

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4.—The name of the winner of the American peace award will be announced tonight at a meeting in the Academy of Music.

John W. Davis, former American ambassador to Great Britain, the principal speaker, will reveal the name of the author of plan 1469, which was selected by the jury of award from more than 22,000 manuscripts submitted. At the same time, Mr. Davis will present the winner with a check for $50,000, one-half the amount of the award. Edward W. Bok, the creator, having stipulated that the other half shall be paid "if and when the plan passes the senate, or if and when the jury of award decides that an adequate degree of popular support has been demonstrated for it."

Announcement of the winner's name, which is known to only one person, a member of the policy committee, will not be made until near the close of the meeting. Then the author of plan 1469 will be called to the platform and the award presented.

Melville E. Stone, co-sponsor of the Associated Press and a member of the award policy committee, will preside at the meeting. In addition to Mr. Davis, addresses will be delivered by Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of war, and Miss Esther Lape, a member of the policy committee, who had charge of the practical details of the award.

HAIL RECOGNITION OF SOVIET BY BRITAIN

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.—The bolshevik press hails the extension of recognition by Great Britain to the soviet government not so much as an act of good will on the part of the new labor government in London as the inevitable result of the soviet success. All the newspapers declare it is of the utmost importance internationally, particularly with reference to what they have long considered the visible differences between France and England.

N. Stekloff, editor of Izvestia, expresses the opinion that the British step undoubtedly will have an influence upon the United States' policy toward Russia, despite American statements to the contrary.

INVENTOR PREDICTS BETTER COMMUNICATION WITH ANTENNAE STUCK INTO GROUND

DR. JAMES H. ROGERS TESTING HIS UNDERGROUND ANTENNAE

BY HAROLD B. WATSON
N.E.A. Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Dig a hole in your back yard and place your radio "aerial" in it. If you would be up to date!

That is, of course, granting that Dr. James H. Rogers, famous inventor, has proved his theory. Some time ago he started experimenting with underground antennae. Today Dr. Rogers, resuming his work after a short illness, freely predicts that underground transmission is considerably less than for aerial antennae.

Dr. Rogers reveals that perfect communication was carried on with points 200 miles away, during experiments he conducted. Interference, he declares, is practically eliminated, difficulties of day reception are reduced to a minimum and the power required for transmission is considerably less than for aerial antennae.

One of Dr. Rogers' underground sets consists of a loop antenna covered with a metal-lined and metal-covered well. He has practically abandoned his high strength aerial on the roof of his laboratory, nightly hearing foreign stations on his submerged set.

Easier Broadcasting
Dr. Rogers believes underground transmission to be an important development in radio science, and predicts it will make possible the concentration of broadcasting at a group of powerful stations.

"These stations," he believes, "will be located at strategic points over the country. Reception will be clear and strong in every set. Interference from so many different wave-lengths being eliminated. The stations will operate something like a telephone switchboard, tuning in for the programs they desire to re-broadcast in their vicinity."

"Communication with trans Atlantic and trans-Pacific points will be among the usual things. But all of this will come only through underground and submarine transmission," Dr. Rogers says.

Aerial Problems
While Dr. Rogers thus would eliminate the weaknesses of radio communication, other inventors are continuing their attempts to perfect aerial transmission.

One of the tasks before the radio division, bureau of standards, is to eliminate "fading" and to devise means to combine broadcasting to its particular wave-length. Once this is done the aerial should enjoy as clear and strong reception as Dr. Rogers claims for the underground apparatus.

RIALTO THEATRE

The biggest theatrical attraction in a decade! That's "Human Wreckage," which opens at R. M. Loew's Rialto theatre today. "Human Wreckage" comes to Lowell with a record of being the greatest box office attraction that the screen has ever done. In all the big cities at $2.00 top, it has jammed the 3000 seat houses to capacity week in and week out. And surely there must be a reason why this picture is such a tremendous success! "Human Wreckage" has the endorsement of many great people, among whom are Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, James J. Davis, secretary of labor, Senator David L. Walsh of Massachusetts, Governor Channing Cox of our own state, and most of the masters of the big cities where this picture has already been shown. Never before in the history of the screen has a picture received such universal commendation. It has been hailed by the press, pulpit and public as one of "the most important pictures ever made." Despite the fact that the Rialto management has secured this picture at an enormous rental, there will positively be no advance in prices. It is announced. Many different types of pictures have been shown in Lowell theatres, but it is doubtful if there was any one of them that carried the powerful message that "Human Wreckage" conveys. The forcefulness of its message and description and it really has to be seen to be appreciated. It is your last opportunity to see this picture and don't be one of those who will be sorry to have missed it! Mrs. Wallace Reid, who appears in the picture in the leading role, is supported by a capable cast including James Kirkwood, Bessie Love and a host of other notable stars. "Human Wreckage" is not the life story of the lamented Wallace Reid. It tells a straightforward story and exposes the dope evil in a manner which leaves nothing to the imagination. It will grip, thrill and amaze you. It is part of life itself—it lives!

THE STRAND

"Black Oxen," the story by Ruth Artheron which created such a stir during 1923, and was listed among the "best sellers" of the year, has been adapted for the screen and is being presented during the first part of the week at The Strand. Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle, supporting the picture in the leading roles, and their support includes some of the screen's most popular stars. "Black Oxen" is a collection of present day society life, and as with every picture of character it is a carefully chosen character. New York society belle who is re-educated and made to look and act like a young woman of 20. Miss Griffith, portraying this role and her work is said to be wonderfully good. Elaborate wardrobe are attractions for the women folk. "You Are In Danger" with Pauline Stark and Conrad Nagel, is inside the house of David; are the other features. Don't miss this big bill.

MERRIMACK SQUARE

Undoubtedly the greatest picture in which Jackie Coogan has been permitted to use his remarkable talents is the picture of the Merrimack Square theatre. Last night its premier in this city was attended by a great and appreciative audience which through the evening continued to give ample evidence of the tremendous popularity which Jackie now has at his command. In fairness to him it is such a beautiful and impressive production as "Long Live the King," that enhance his popularity and make him more beloved.
The story of "Long Live the King" is a familiar one to readers of American books. It is a screen version of the famous novel of the same name written some twenty years ago by Mary Weston. It is a story of a country threatened at every turn by revolution and anarchy. It is highly exciting romance and the producers have not only lost none of the fascination of the story but have added to its delight by giving it a wonderfully beautiful presentation.
Dustin Farnum in "Kentucky Day," is the other featured attraction.

H. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

Edith Clasper, one of the most appealing of youthful dancers, will give her splendid act at the H. F. Keith theatre, this week, assisted by Paul O'Neal and Paul Yocan. This act is in the nature of a production with special music and lyrics composed for it. Moore and Freed will also be present with their latest edition of "Spinning." It is a pure novelty. Miss Peggy Fears and Harry Miller will offer their eccentric dancing turn, and there will be a demonstration of sword play by Louis by Gustave Westerholt. Other acts for the week are Nan Traveline, a popular songstress, and Julius Furst, a European comedian, is a veritable sensation. The picture feature will be "The Empty Cradle" with a wonderful cast, including the noted Harry Morcy.

DISTRIBUTE BILLERICA TOWN REPORTS

BillERICA town reports for the past year are being distributed to the voters. They contain comprehensive facts and figures covering the work of all town executive committees and officials during the year 1923, and also have many recommendations to make to the voters, who are to assemble in annual town meeting next Saturday.
The finance committee makes a recommendation of a tax rate of $28 for 1924 and the selectmen also urge that a policy of retrenchment be adopted by the voters forthwith.
The assessors' report, gives the town's total valuation at $7,349,488. A total number of 1440 residents and 2668 non-residents were assessed on property.
The tax collector's report shows the total commitment for 1923 as being $237,352.16, with uncollected taxes Dec. 31, 1922, of $86,665.69.

INTERESTING ADDRESS

Rev. John W. Keyes, S. J.,
Addresses League of Catholic Women

"The Sterling-Reed and Kindred Bills" was the subject of a very interesting address by Rev. John W. Keyes, S. J., before the members and friends of the League of Catholic Women in Liberty hall, yesterday afternoon. The lecture was the first in a series of similar talks on civics, the speaker being introduced by the chairman of the civics committee, Miss Eva Blanchard.

"Do you know," spoke Fr. Keyes, "that in the last congress there were as many as 100 bills brought up which in one way or another would curtail the rights of the parents in this matter of education?"

"Is there anything nearer, dearer, closer to the home, than the education of the children?"

"When the proponents of this bill speak to an audience they will say, 'Is not education a thing of general welfare?' They appeal to the President, the Constitution, and it was with this appeal in view that Mr. Smith of Georgia proposed this bill. And in this bill he advocated nationalized education."

"That bill was defeated, and then Mr. Smith and Mr. Towner put their heads together, and said they must exclude the idea of federal control. And the Smith-Towner bill was produced. Then it became the Towner-Sterling bill and now it is the Sterling-Reed bill."

It is exactly the same bill. The words are changed, but the spirit of the bill still remains. In case of difference of opinion between a state and the national secretary of education, the matter is to be reported to congress, and the appropriation is to be withheld from the state. Does not that speak of federal control?

"Do you think the federal government is going to spend a hundred million dollars on the state without specifying how it is to be spent? That money is not theirs to give. It belongs to the people, and they have to give a strict account. It is the secretary of education that must say, ultimately, how the money is to be spent. Does not that spell federal control?"

"What books will be taught? We are told that one reason why this bill will better the people, is that the children must be taught the merits of statesmen—that the people do not know how to vote. The secretary of education is to supply the books, is he not? And if he is a republican, is he going to represent a democrat in his best light?"

"What books are they going to put into the hands of the children? Today, in some histories, the battle of Bunker Hill is made to appear like a myth, or like some misunderstanding that we should forget."

"Education is to be in the hands of the government because it pertains to the general welfare. On that same argument, may I ask, is not religion conducive to the general welfare? May we not expect to have also a commissioner of religion?"

"Then we are told that the teacher's salaries will be raised. Will they? Ask those men who are in federal positions. The District of Columbia is governed in educational matters by congress. Are you aware that those teachers that are directly under federal control are getting less than the ordinary teacher of a town of 100,000 population?"

Dr. Emma Y. Slaughter, president of the League, presided at the meeting before turning it over to the chairman of the day.

Musical numbers were given by Miss Alma Soukard, piano, and Miss Emily Claudette, well known local soloist.

WHERE WOODROW WILSON DIED

MRS. FRANCIS SAYRE MISS MARGARET WILSON MRS. WILLIAM McADOO

Physician and Financier
Friends and Confidants of
Wilson to the End

Bond Between Wilson and
Grayson Almost as a Feeling of Father and Son

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press.) Many friends and confidants came into Woodrow Wilson's life after he entered the White House. Many also passed out. Of all those who came, two notably remained to his dying moment.

One was his physician, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson; the other was Bernard M. Baruch, the New York financier and counsellor on the intricacies of the post war problems. Of the two, Mr. Wilson's relationship with Dr. Grayson was the more personal, the bond between them was almost as a feeling between father and son. Mr. Wilson's friendship for Mr. Baruch, although personal also was sustained on the foundation of two minds that ran along together on common causes.

Grayson, the confidant and friend of two presidents before Wilson, brought to his chief touches of nature which many declared were not part of Mr. Wilson's natural equipment. Nevertheless, it was a profound respect for these attributes which grew into close friendship and companionship.

Dr. Grayson was the son of a Virginia country doctor, orphaned early in life, who took his hard knocks while getting an education. From his father and from experience he probably inherited the innately human conceptions of nature itself, as only the old style country doctor acquires them and these he brought to Woodrow Wilson.

The public mind most associates this physician, about whom it had heard so much, through the illness and death of Mr. Wilson. But long before Woodrow Wilson ever was heard of as a presidential possibility, Dr. Grayson was a naval officer attached to the White House as a physician to President Roosevelt. Because he knew something about human nature, birds, trees and animals, particularly horses, he was not long in becoming Colonel Roosevelt's aid and companion. There were other aides to be sure, but this young Virginia doctor, modest even to the point of being shy, soft spoken and generous, loyal in his convictions and friendships, was the one President Roosevelt picked out when he wanted a companion for some exciting horse-back ride or something strenuous.

The American people were thrilled when President Roosevelt just to show some army officers that he asked of no one something he himself would not do, made his famous 90 mile horse-back ride from Washington to Warrenton, and back in a cold steady rain, that froze as it fell. Nobody mentioned that Dr. Grayson rode every foot of the way at his chief's side and sometimes guided the president's horse when his spectacles were con-

President Roosevelt turned Grayson over to President Taft, with a recommendation for loyalty and he won Mrs. Taft's heart with his sympathetic devotion to her delicate health.

Woodrow Wilson had never heard of Cary T. Grayson when he stepped into the White House on March 4, 1913.

On that day came a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.

Several physicians of the army and navy, including Grayson, were attached to the White House. Inauguration day with its spectacle and splendor lured all but one of them from the post. Grayson elected to remain on duty. The first Mrs. Wilson, as she stopped through the White House portals in her first moments as its mistress, met with an unimportant but painful accident. A call for a doctor was answered immediately by Grayson.

Mrs. Wilson commended to her husband this modest young man, who had seemed devoted to duty. He became Mr. Wilson's aide and physician and as the years went on, his friend. No political wires were pulled; no influence figured in the disposition in one of the most coveted posts in Washington.

A little more than a year later, on August 10, 1914, a world war broke out. Grayson, the first Mrs. Wilson lay on her death bed. Her last words to Grayson were "Take good care of Woodrow, please." How well that promise was kept probably only a recording angel may know now.

Some time after Mrs. Wilson's death, Dr. Grayson introduced to Miss Helen Woodrow House, president Wilson's housewife and guest at the White House a friend of long acquaintance. Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, Miss Bones took her into the small White House circle where Mrs. Wilson met her. The lady later became Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Some time after that Mr. Wilson on recommendation of Secretary Daniels of the navy department, nominated Grayson for promotion to the rank of rear admiral. The real truth of that matter was that in conversation with Mr. Daniels' son before her death, the first Mrs. Wilson asked the secretary of the navy to give to her husband's physician and aide, senior rank commensurate with his responsibility, and to insure his attachment to the White House against any routine arrangement. Grayson never knew he had been nominated for promotion until he read it in the newspapers. There was opposition, somewhat like that which attended President Roosevelt's promotion of General Wood. It was offered Grayson's modesty that later, when he had an opportunity to become, sixteen years later, the secretary of the navy, he declined it.

SCENE AT WILSON HOME, WHEN DEATH WAS ANNOUNCED

Former President
Passed From Life
While He Slept

The federal government already has offered to do whatever is fitting to express the nation's reverence at the passing of a great leader. President Coolidge called yesterday at the home of bereavement, expressed his regret and his readiness to be helpful, and then issued a proclamation of 30 days official mourning. Over the White House and the government departments, on the nation's fighting ships at sea and over the outposts of American diplomacy in foreign lands, the Stars and Stripes were brought to half mast. Congress today recessed in respect for his memory and the whole machinery of the government, whose guiding genius he was for eight momentous years, will stand still on the day of his funeral.

The place of entombment has not been selected, but it is probable his body will be placed for a while in a Washington cemetery. There it will await the erection of a memorial to serve as his last resting place, and to perpetuate fittingly in stone the memory of those great days of crisis when the world hung upon his words.

Today the trayed remnant of his mortality lies in the chamber whose walls looked down yesterday upon the last scene of a career that had known all the heights and depths of human emotion. In death he appears as if in peaceful sleep, his features serene and composed and his square jaw set with the old determination. But the lines are somewhat deeper and heavier and the flashing fire of his eyes has gone out forever.

The bed on which Woodrow Wilson died and where his body rests is of massive oak, a reproduction of the bed built at the White House for Lincoln and used by every president since. It is of unusual length and has a golden American eagle over the head. It was made to the order of Mr. Wilson before he retired from the presidency and was installed in the S street house he had selected as his future home.

Although he had not known a well day since he crossed the threshold of the place of his retirement, or for months before, last Friday saw the beginning of the end of his long illness. His collapse during his western speaking trip in 1919, followed by a stroke of paralysis soon after his return to Washington, had made him almost an invalid long ago. Early last week, a slight digestive disorder further weakened his delicate vitality and on Friday his friend and physician, Dr. Grayson, found his condition growing hourly more serious.

He refused nourishment, and by Saturday night he was barely conscious. At 9 o'clock, he fell asleep and never awakened again. It was at 11:15 a. m. that he finally went out. From first to last he was without pain, and in his last waking moments he appeared to be resting in complete comfort.

As the end approached, the little group watching in the sick room drew nearer and nearer. Mrs. Wilson sat on the bed beside him, with his almost lifeless hand in both of hers. Close by was his eldest daughter, Margaret Wilson; and Dr. Grayson, faithful in his ministrations since the first sign of illness more than four years ago, watched for some new way at least to help him as he crossed the bar.

More and more feebly became the pulse beat; there was a quickening of the breath; little by little death was completing its conquest. A quick flutter of the eyelids, a faint smile, almost like a smile across the wasted features, and the spirit of the great war president had burst at last the long-sustaining fetters that bound it to earth.

Thus, he who had dreamed a high dream of peace for all the world had found peace for himself and had left behind a world still tossed by strife and turmoil.

Thus, he against whom life had turned at last, after leading a life through paths of greatest glory, found death gentle and even peaceful.

Thus, with the soft chanting of hymns floating in on the Sabbath air was written the last letter of that imperishable chapter of human history, comprising the life of Woodrow Wilson.

Of his position as physician, friend and confidant of Woodrow Wilson really were. One thing is certain. He devoted seven years of his life to keeping Woodrow Wilson a well man and four more to keeping him alive.

GOVERNOR COX EXPRESSES GRIEF

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—State officials yesterday were much grieved at the death of former President Wilson. Governor Cox said: "For the second time within a year the whole nation is crushed by universal sorrow. A leader whose services to his country will take rank with the highest has fallen. President Wilson was called upon to carry the overwhelming burden of summoning the American people to enter the greatest of wars and to hold them steadfast in their purpose until it was won. He succeeded, and his mighty contribution to the preservation of civilization will be held in most grateful remembrance. His matchless power of statement set the tremendous issues involved in such plain terms that all understood. The country is the better for the ideals to which he gave happy expression. He gave his life in the service of the people who honored him living, and who will hold his memory in highest honor."

EX-PRES. WILSON'S NURSE

PARIS COMMENT ON WILSON'S DEATH

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Former President Wilson's death was featured prominently by this morning's newspapers, indeed almost to the exclusion of other topics. There are many pictures of the American war president and copious biographies. Most of the commentators adversely criticize his achievements, though the reasons given differ according to the political leanings of the writers.

"Andre Tardieu in the Echo National, writes: 'The people of France will not forget that if Woodrow Wilson might have been mistaken in certain political aspects of the peace, he gave his whole mind, soul and will to the war. He fell fighting on the battlefield of peace for those ideals of collaboration to which the shortsighted egoists who put the world where it is now, have persisted in turning their backs.'

"France after honoring him, became unjustly severe to him. When time shall have struck a just mean, our country will remember that this great associate in the war was deprived of office for having wished to remain our associate in the peace."

L'Œuvre says, 'No man ever, after raising such high hopes, finally caused such deep disappointment.'

PARIS, Feb. 4. (By the Associated Press.)—President Millerand today called Mrs. Wilson as follows:

"In the name of the French nation and in my own name, I associate myself with all my heart in the grief that has so cruelly come to you."

"My country will never forget the great president who played such an important part in the decision whereby the United States came to take her place beside France and her allies in the war of right against might."

"Humanity will cherish the memory of the generous thinker whose dearest wish was to assure forever the peace of the world."

Mayor Curley's Tribute

Mayor James M. Curley—"A martyr to liberty once wrote:

"Greatest grew greater by the lapse of time;
We know those least whom we have seen the latest;
And they, 'mongst those whose names have grown sublime,
Who worked for Human Liberty, are greatest."

"Posterior, fortified with facts and removed from the scene and events, will yet inscribe beside the names of Washington and Lincoln the name of that lover and champion of human liberty whose death represents a loss that is universal—Woodrow Wilson."

"His labors and sufferings are at an end. He has earned the right to rest. May he rest in peace."

Cong. Rogers' Tribute

Congressman Rogers, during the entire period of the war, I served on the house committee on foreign affairs, and thereby had occasion to have frequent personal contact with President Wilson. I never failed to be conscious of his personal charm and magnanimity and was favorably treated by him with the highest courtesy and consideration. To my mind the passing of Wilson is the passing of a man who will loom large always in the history of his country. He lived in a time of stress and his habit of mind and viewpoint was such that he never shrunk from conflict or even strife if he saw his duty clearly. After the bitterness of the war period is over, after the view of history has had an opportunity to sort itself, the world will more accurately appreciate his contribution to human thought."

Legion Commander's Tribute

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 4. (By the Associated Press.)—The American Legion today, after leaving here for Boston yesterday, National Commander John B. Quinn of the American Legion issued

PROCLAMATION BY GOV. COX

Directs That in Memory of
Wilson a 30-Day Period of Mourning Be Observed

Governor Also Sends Message of Sympathy to Mrs. Wilson

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—Governor Chandler H. Cox in a proclamation issued today, directed that in memory of Woodrow Wilson, a 30 day period of mourning be observed, with flags half staffed on all public buildings. He also sent this telegram to Mrs. Wilson: "On behalf of the people of Massachusetts, let me express their feeling of sorrow in the death of Mr. Wilson. Massachusetts held him in honor while living and will cherish his memory. You have the deepest sympathy of our people."

(Signed) "CHANNING H. COX, Governor of Massachusetts."

The proclamation read as follows: "With profound sorrow, the people of our Commonwealth have learned of the death of Woodrow Wilson. The leader who carried the heavy burden of the national government during eight years of deepest trial has ended his earthly labors."

"It was the mighty responsibility of summoning the American people to enter the greatest of wars, and to head them steadfast to their purpose to the end. His large contribution to the preservation of civilization will be held in the most grateful remembrance. The country is the better for the ideals to which he gave expression. He gave his life in the service of the people who honored him living, and who are crushed with universal grief by his death."

"In token of the love and reverence which our people have for him, I direct that the national and state flags be flown at half staff for a period of 30 days, and I urge that in schools and churches his loss be marked with proper reverence."

"Given in the executive chambers in February, etc., etc."

"CHANNING H. COX, Governor of Massachusetts."

Tributes From Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 4.—All the Chilean newspapers devote many columns to the death of Woodrow Wilson and comment extensively upon his life and achievements. The general trend of the comment is that Latin-America will never cease to treasure his memory as a great man who embodied the best ideals of the most progressive people in the world.

Former President Orlando, declared to be president of Woodrow Wilson's attitude respecting Italy's claims at the peace conference, declines to make public a statement on his death.

The following statement on the death of Woodrow Wilson:

"I believe that Woodrow Wilson died in the line of duty as surely as if his breast had been pierced by a bullet in the fields of France. He had gone to join the thousands of our young men who went forth to die and die that his ideal to save the world for democracy might prevail. The world may well bewail that God will not seem fit to take this great idealist when it so sorely needs a commander."

Mr. Quinn said that he was going to initiate a movement to have President Wilson buried in Arlington cemetery as one of the greatest war heroes. He said he would cancel his speaking tour with past national commanders and officials of the legion with a view to forming a committee "to do honor to our former great leader."

MAYOR DONOVAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO WILSON

Word of Woodrow Wilson's death reached Lowell by telegraph and radio shortly after official announcement had been made in Washington. Mayor John J. Donovan immediately ordered flags on all public buildings half-staffed and through his secretary arranged for the tolling of bells on the fire alarm system. The national salute of 21 strokes was used.

In connection with the former president's passing the mayor paid the following tribute: "A notable figure in world's history has passed to his reward. No one will deny the unsurpassed statesmanship and brilliant mentality of Woodrow Wilson. He guided our nation through dark and ominous days of warfare with masterly prudence and sound judgment."

"His subsequent policies of administration naturally invoked division of opinion, right or wrong, he sacrificed his life that his ideals of America's responsibilities in world affairs might live. Cold, perhaps, in personal relations, his sincere love of his country will never be questioned. Woodrow Wilson's 'pivotal' genius of thought as expressed in state papers will prove a guidance for posterity in the shaping of national destinies. To, and posterity will undoubtedly place a more just estimate of Woodrow Wilson and his service to humanity than has been awarded him in his day and generation."

(Signed) "JOHN J. DONOVAN, Mayor."

WILSON GREAT MAN, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

CHURCH, Surrey, England, Feb. 4. (By the Associated Press.)—At his new country home here, high up in the Surrey hills, where the fresh breezes have added further color to his usual healthy glow, David Lloyd George, great Britain's war prime minister, yesterday heard from the correspondent of the Associated Press the news of the peaceful passing of Woodrow Wilson.

"Woodrow Wilson will become one of the great figures of history," said Mr. Lloyd George's tribute to the man who shortly before had passed away in Washington.

"He was a man," Mr. Lloyd George added, "and therefore had his weakness, but he was the first to embody the ideal of fraternity of nations into a concrete plan."

"Like the founder of Christianity, the central figure in history, and like Lincoln after him he presented his ideal to his tragic death. These circumstances, if nothing more, would make his memory last in the minds of men."

"Wilson, like Lincoln and other great idealists, has not lived to see his dreams realized. Nevertheless his work will be carried on to his own glory and the permanent benefit of mankind. In the national sense he led his country out onto the road of world affairs, from which there is no turning back."

WILSON CRUCIFIED BY POLITICIANS

CAMPDEN, N. J., Feb. 4.—John W. Westcott, of this city, who twice nominated Woodrow Wilson for the democratic presidential nomination, paid tribute to his dead friend today.

"Woodrow Wilson was the most intensely moral man I have ever known," he said.

"The Nazarene was misunderstood, as Woodrow Wilson has been misunderstood and crucified by politicians. But as Christ is more potent today in human affairs than ever, so the commanding and practical morality of this remarkable man will ever grow, spread and ultimately come to the actual relationship between nations and between individuals."

Arteriosclerosis and paralysis are officially named as the causes of former President Wilson's death.

Probably no one will ever know what the complexities and difficulties

"I Am Broken-Hearted," Says Ex-Secretary Tumulty—
"Perhaps Greatest Man America Has Produced," Declares McAdoo—Other Tributes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to ex-President Wilson during both his terms of office, issued the following statement on the death of his former chief:

"I am broken hearted by this terrible news. Eleven years of intimate association with this great man, both in New Jersey and in the capitol of the nation, have built in my heart in blocks of everlasting granite an affection, an admiration and a trust, a loyalty that has continued to this eventful moment.

"America never needed more than at this critical hour the sustaining force of the broad idealism of Woodrow Wilson; and it is too bad that this figure, like a mighty oak, has toppled over. When his voice might have called us back to those knightly days when his influence was used to help a depressed nation and to bring peace to a stricken world.

"He was not only human; he was great. His humanness, however, was made of too fine a fibre to be used for self-exaltation; nor would he ever permit it to be so used. The trouble with his peculiar kind of humanness was this:

"It did not bubble, it did not effervesce, it did not sparkle. And so they called him cold, when he was only shy; they mistook his gentility for austerity. But that kind of man will live in the hearts and thoughts of men forever. They did not understand Woodrow Wilson; neither did they understand Lincoln. There was something mysteriously hidden about Woodrow Wilson's greatness and, unfortunately, we of this generation caught only flashes of it.

"Now that he is dead, we shall get a new and clearer glimpse into that big heart and then perhaps we shall see how full it was of love for honor, justice and humanity. The spark transmitted by Woodrow Wilson may smoulder for generations under ashes, but the appointed time will come when it will flare up to bring peace to a stricken world. And then those who misunderstood him and misinterpreted the fine things he thought to do for humanity will rub their eyes and wonder and regret.

"He lived in true accord with the spirit underlying the world of Kipling—he kept his head when all about him were losing theirs and blaming it on him; when he died about him did not give way to hate, he dreamed but did not make his dreams his master. He heard the truth he had spoken twisted by knaves and fools and then watched the things he had given his life to, broken, and stooped and built them up again with worn-out tools.

"This was an exceptional mind and heart, which neither gave an affront nor bore enmity and feared nothing when it was conceived.

McADOO PAYS TRIBUTE

Declares Woodrow Wilson
"Perhaps Greatest Man America Has Produced"

SUNSHINE, Ariz., Feb. 4.—Woodrow Wilson was described as "perhaps the greatest man America has produced" in a statement yesterday by William G. McAdoo, ex-secretary of the treasury and director general of the railroad, when informed of the war-time president's death in Washington.

"Woodrow Wilson always will be one of the most commanding figures of human history," said Mr. McAdoo. "Judged by accomplishments and achievements—taken in all he is perhaps the greatest man America yet has produced.

"He was a rare combination—a charming companion, a ripe scholar, a Christian gentleman, a consummate leader, a superb statesman, a dauntless figure, a noble idealist, a lofty soul, and a genuine lover of mankind.

"He made a matchless contribution to his time in the fields of politics, economics and letters.

"He was the champion of peace, of human brotherhood and world order.

"Out of his sacrifice and suffering, borne with superb dignity and with sublime courage, the good he has brought to do for humanity will inevitably be realized.

"His example and his work will influence the destiny of civilization for centuries to come.

"Woodrow Wilson, the man, is dead; but Woodrow Wilson, the apostle of peace, the lover of mankind, will live forever.

Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo, the latter Mr. Wilson's daughter, who left their home in Los Angeles Saturday morning for Washington on receipt of word of Mr. Wilson's illness, will continue their journey to the capitol.

WALSH LAUDS WILSON

Was World's Outstanding Leader When Civilization
Was in Balance

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts paid the following tribute to the ex-president:

"In the death of Woodrow Wilson, one of the great figures of the world has passed away. He was the world's outstanding leader when civilization was in the balance. He courageously valued the hopes and aspirations of mankind for freedom and democratic institutions as no other statesman of our time. Unfortunately for the world, however, intrigues of European statesmen prevented the realization of the idealism he preached. What he sought to do for world progress and peace was shattered in the European diplomatic mart.

"His administration as president will long shine as a beacon of advanced liberalism.

"As one who admired his patriotism, his idealism, his scholarship and his devotion to duty, I mourn his death."

EX-PRESIDENT TAFT'S TRIBUTE TO WILSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Chief Justice William H. Taft of the supreme court, now the only living ex-president of the United States, yesterday paid the following tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson:

"Mr. Wilson, in the latter years of the war and the year following the armistice, was the greatest figure on the world's stage. No man in a century wielded more power and influence. He was born to command with confidence and courage, and events gave him an opportunity to lead men not given to any other in our history. He was a man of high ideals and great force of character to pursue them. A deep student of government; a scholar of wide culture, a writer and orator of happy, apt and beautiful diction, he brought to the great place he held most exceptional facilities. He will live in the ideals he preached and sought."

"Time Alone Can Write His Epitaph"

Twenty-eighth president of the United States, and the first democrat since Jackson to serve two successive terms, Woodrow Wilson occupied the presidency during eight years of such world upheaval and turmoil, that his proper place in history cannot be assigned to him until his contemporaries are dead and their niches filled.

Certainly, he ranks as one of the great war presidents of the American republic, and he exercised such an influence in world affairs as never before attached to his office.

Empires crumbled, thrones collapsed, the map of the world was redrawn, and under his administration the country abandoned its policy of isolation and became an active participant in world affairs. In all of that he took a powerful hand. No biographer could attempt to assess him accurately, and in full, until the processes which began in his day and with his participation have come to a conclusion.

An obscure lawyer, by nature a man of letters, he became an educator and won his first attention from the public as president of Princeton university. Then by the strange ways of a political system he became governor of New Jersey and later, because the voters of the republican party were divided between Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft, he became president of the United States.

Worshipped and Hated

During his eight years of power he traveled the gamut of human emotions: victory, defeat, courtship, and marriage; responsibility for leading a nation into war with the collateral responsibility of bringing it back again to the ways of peace; and finally a daily struggle with death.

He had heard himself hailed by the millions of Europe as "the God of peace," and heard his name sung by the same millions. Acclaimed at one time almost as a new Messiah, he heard himself excoriated and denounced as an autocrat and worse at home and abroad. No other president since Lincoln was so worshipped and hated; no other president since Roosevelt had such friends and such enemies. Through it all he preserved an outward calm while the grim destroyer which hovered close about him during the last months of his occupancy of the presidency, followed him relentlessly to the modest home where he lived the ways of a retired gentleman and knocked his door every day until it was at last opened.

After having borne the burdens of a war president, he undertook the task of making a peace which he sincerely believed would be a lasting one and although he succeeded in getting Europe to accept it in large measure, his own country rejected it. And in the light he broke his health, wore himself out, suffered a stroke of paralysis which led to his death, and declared through it all that he would have been happy to give his life for the success of his efforts.

Precedent Smasher

Woodrow Wilson was a precedent smasher from beginning to end. He began by reviving the practice of Washington and Jefferson in delivering his messages to congress in person; he finished by actually leaving American soil and going to Europe. He was the only president to decide with a country with conflicting sympathies was ready to throw itself into the great world war, and when the moment came he took the responsibility of throwing in the men and millions, which turned the scale to victory.

Whatever an army of Boswells may write, that will be the part in which he will be best remembered by coming generations.

Born in Staunton, Va., Dec. 28, 1856, of Scotch-Irish parentage, he was christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson and he was known in early life as "Tommy." After he was graduated from Princeton he became an attorney, and Woodrow Wilson, his father, was the Rev. Joseph Hughes Wilson, a Presbyterian clergyman, and his mother was Jessie Woodrow.

When he was two years old the fortunes of his father took the family to Augusta, Ga., and later to Columbia, S. C., where at the age of 17 Thomas Woodrow Wilson entered Davidson college, but left there soon to go to Princeton. After graduation at Princeton he studied law at the University of Virginia and in 1882 hung out his shingle in Atlanta, Ga. Meantime he courted Ellen Louise Axson, the daughter of a Savannah Presbyterian clergyman. They were married in 1885 and had three daughters, Margaret, the eldest, who did not marry; Jessie, who became the wife of Francis Bowes Sayre, and Eleanor, who became the wife of William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury during her father's administration and later a presidential aspirant.

Mr. Wilson once said that as a young lawyer he wore out the rug in his office walking around the desk waiting for clients. He abandoned a legal career and went to Johns Hopkins university at Baltimore for a post graduate course in letters.

While there he published his first book, "Congressional Government," a study in American politics. It evoked offers of professorships at Yale, Stanford and Wesleyan and won recognition at home and abroad. The young man who wrote of the defects of the American political system in 1885 found himself to deal with them later. Having written in a derogatory tone of the tendency toward autocracy in American presidents, he lived to hear himself called the greatest autocrat of them all and see a resolution of his office vacant of the same grounds introduced and tabled in the senate.

Successively Mr. Wilson became professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr and at Wesleyan university and later professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton where, subsequently, he was made head of that institution. Meanwhile, Prof. Wilson had gained high reputation as a writer. Some of his works, with the date of their production, were as follows: "The State," (1885); "Division and Reunion," (1889); "George Washington," (1890); "The American People," (1892); "Constitutional Government in the United States," (1893); "Free Life," (1913); "When a Man Comes to Himself," (1915); "On Being Human," (1916); "An Old Master and Other Political Essays," and "More Literature and Other Essays," were among his earlier writings. His state papers, notes to belligerent governments and addresses to congress, would fill many volumes.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was bestowed upon him by Wake Forest college (1887), Tulane university (1893), Johns Hopkins (1902), Brown university (1903), Harvard university (1907), Williams college (1908), and Dartmouth college (1909). Yale made him a doctor of literature in 1901.

Life was a pretty well settled affair for him while he was president of Princeton. Its great oaks, shaded lawns and historic halls, furnished the settings in which Mr. Wilson did much of his literary work which he was to attract the world. He probably had little thought of being snatched into the maelstrom of politics and war. He drew some public attention in the field for preservation of democratic ideals at the university, but he lived the life of a family man on small pay and as late as 1910 was contemplating retirement on a teacher's pension.

That was the inexorable force of events came into evidence. The tide which "sweeps on to fortune" began to rise about him. Nominated for governor of New Jersey in a political situation about which many interesting things have been said and denied with equal fervor, he was elected on the democratic ticket, and immediately on the state ticket for a second year of combat which attracted the attention of the country. In the Jersey legislature he found the young lawyer, Joseph P. Tumulty, who became his private secretary and biographer.

Nominated at Baltimore

Political opponents charged Governor Wilson with radicalism, but he drove his program through. The outstanding legislation was the "seven sisters laws," a series of bills drafted under his direction which dealt with trusts. New Jersey up to that time, because of its corporate laws, had been called a rendezvous for monopolies.

His nomination for president for the presidency at the democratic convention of 1912 in Baltimore was one of the dramatic spectacles of American political history. It was a battle royal which brought him victory after more than 40 ballots.

Champ Clark, the venerable and beloved speaker of the house of representatives, led Wilson in the early voting, which he polled a majority of the delegates. For the first time in history a democratic national convention refused to give the necessary two-thirds to a candidate who had gotten a majority. William Jennings Bryan, himself the nominee of three previous conventions, led the fight against Clark in one of the bitterest contests conducted in American politics. It broke Clark's heart—he never forgave Wilson or Bryan—and he opposed Wilson's policies in congress repeatedly. Clark knew he lost not only the nomination, but the presidency, for the contest between Taft and Roosevelt assured such a rift in the republican vote that the election of a democrat was all but certain.

That invention realized this, for the man who nominated Clark declared: "We meet not only to choose a candidate but to choose a president."

Elected Over Taft and Roosevelt

At any rate, Woodrow Wilson got the nomination and the election with 435 electoral votes. Roosevelt got 88 and Taft got 8. He came to the White House on March 1, 1913, signaling the return of democracy to power after successive defeats of 16 years.

Immediately he galvanized the country, appearing before congress in person, publicly denouncing "a vicious lobby" which he charged was attempting to influence in Washington and launched a legislative program which included repeal of the tariff, revision of the currency system, new styles of control of the trusts, the creation of many new government agencies, and such a multitude of other legislative business that congress and the country had difficulty in keeping up with it.

Congress thought Theodore Roosevelt a "dictator" and an "autocrat" but it soon found itself dancing to Woodrow Wilson's tune and at that it danced very obediently and with very little grumbling. Mr. Wilson early confessed that he had a "strong frame of mind" and he proved to congress early in his administration that he knew what he wanted and how to get it. He had a cabinet, it was true, but he consulted it after he had determined what he wanted to do. When he wanted a bill introduced in congress, he drafted it and he drew it off if he hesitated on passage he summoned the leaders—and it passed soon thereafter.

In dealing with the cabinet he did his own thinking and conducted much important business of the various departments direct from the White House.

Mexican Trouble Broke

Hardly had Mr. Wilson gotten himself turned around when he had his first foreign situation to deal with. It was with Mexico and was a legacy from the preceding republican administration. The republican chief of state, Woodrow Wilson, had caused them to do what they did not want to do. The democrats declared the republicans had "passed the buck." It came to a crisis when Huerta, the dictator, seized the reins of government, and President Madero and Vice-President Suarez were murdered. Mr. Wilson had very fixed ideas of his own on succession to the presidency by assassination. He thought it pretty general in Central America and he told candidates it was wrong to stop. He withheld recognition from Huerta and the situation held until Huerta troops attacked some American legations at Tampico and Mr. Wilson ordered the occupation of Vera Cruz by the American army. The official reason given for the occupation was that the German ship Ayranimo was about to land arms and ammunition for Huerta and the occupation was to prevent it. The United States demanded a salute to the flag, which Huerta refused. The Wilson administration took delight in pointing out, never was given.

Events in Mexico solved their own problem in a few months when Carranza, another newly risen leader, ejected Huerta who fled. American troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz and later President Wilson extended formal recognition to Carranza, government. But in 1920, Carranza returned to the face of a revolution and the Mexican problem came back to a republican administration "for settlement." "Watchful waiting" was not alone Mr. Wilson's.

Mr. Wilson was much criticized for "weakness" in handling the Mexican situation, but his friends said he saw a World War coming and had told them he "did not propose to have the United States caught with our hands tied behind its back." He did not propose to be engaged in a war with Mexico at such a time. At all events, the World War broke the same year. Woodrow Wilson added his appeals to the futile effort to stay it, sitting by the bedside of his dying wife on a memorable August 6, 1914. Mrs. Wilson passed away that day, and with a world taking fire about him, he took her body to her childhood home in Rome, Georgia, for burial. The president was almost prostrated with his grief, and returned alone to the White House to face his burden. Mr. Wilson's friends always said that from the first Mr. Wilson saw it would be a World War and that the United States eventually would be drawn in. But he realized that the country drawing its population from the states of Europe which were going to war would face a much divided sentiment and a very difficult situation. His first words to his countrymen were a caution to strict neutrality.

Handed Passports to Bernstein

Mr. Wilson's efforts were devoted to keeping his country neutral until the situation outraged him. He was at first unable to believe that the atrocities had the sanction of the German government but was convinced when they sank the Lusitania. That incident brought the first rift in his official family. William Jennings Bryan, secretary of state, an avowed pacifist, opposed Mr. Wilson's course, and left the cabinet. Mr. Wilson nevertheless went ahead and warned the German government against sacrificing the lives of American citizens. Through a diplomatic correspondence which continued for two years, the president built up a record which reached its climax when he handed passports to Count Johann Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, and asked congress to declare war which it did. With that the president led the nation into the tremendous effort before it.

U. S. Enters War

Meanwhile, with a world war all about him, Mr. Wilson had found time for an affair of the heart. He had met Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, the widow of a Washington merchant. Their courtship was swift, and they were married December 15, 1915. There were no children of this second marriage.

A presidential election had intervened before the country went into the war and this time Mr. Wilson's republican opponent was Charles Evans Hughes, who left the supreme court bench to become a candidate. The issues of that campaign were very much muddled. The democratic slogan was "Keep us out of war." Mr. Wilson's election, however, was a very narrow margin. The result trembled in the balance three days and finally turned in his favor when California finally flipped to the democratic column by a few votes. Mr. Wilson got 277 votes in the electoral college and Mr. Hughes got 234.

Mr. Wilson actually assumed the place as commander in chief of the army and navy. He took the leading part in planning America's participation in the war. He insisted from the first for a unified command on the western front; for vigorous measures to curb the submarine menace. He boldly insisted much of the war legislation, such as the passage of the selective service law, the creation of the shipping board, the war industries board, the war labor board and a multitude of other arms of the government for carrying on the struggle. He devoted his whole being to the war, seeing nobody and thinking of nothing but the war. In his days probably were like Lincoln's.

He negotiated for armistice

It was President Wilson who conducted the correspondence with Chancellor Max of Germany, when the request for an armistice came, and once the German had agreed to it, he turned his thought wholly from war to peace, telling his friends that while Germany must be made to pay to her full ability, Europe must not have another Alsace-Lorraine.

It was quite a different Woodrow Wilson who sat in the president's chair when the war was over. He showed the effects. He had learned something about men and human nature. He had learned, he told a friend, "that some men become great and others small," but his penchant for doing things himself never had lessened. He wrote state papers and read them to the cabinet. He became intimate with men who disagreed with him and frequently dismissed them. He quarreled with friends who in turn reproached him with being ungrateful, but he always kept on his course having once decided upon it.

Committed U. S. to League

Peace in sight, Mr. Wilson decided to go to Europe himself and take a hand in making it. Congress, no longer the suppliant hand maiden it was during his first administration, roared its disapproval. Mr. Wilson assured congress that in the day of need and calm it would know all that he was doing. He told congress very little of what he was doing, or anybody else for that matter, until it was done. That was not Mr. Wilson's way. The result was that he committed the United States to the League of Nations and was repudiated.

President Wilson's participation in the memorable peace conference had been described by many pens, friendly and unfriendly, and his part was so indelibly written in recent history that it needs little attention in a brief resume of his life work.

The statements of Europe were torn by his oratory, his wit and his personality. Until they found him so indelible will to do things his way when he was convinced he was right. Then the sparks flew in the secret meetings he had with Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando. He was determined to have a League of Nations covenant so inseparably interwoven with a treaty of peace that no action could accept one without accepting the other. The opposing statesmen found that only by being plain he could they get the provisions of peace they wanted. The result was a treaty in which all got something and it was denounced by its opponents as a breeder of wars rather than a treaty of peace.

It would require a large volume to tell all the interesting things that happened to Woodrow Wilson while

PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS OF EX-PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON

His Personality Was in Many Respects the Most Unusual That Ever Inhabited White House—Admired, Worshipped and Hated—Had Few Intimates

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Associated Press—Woodrow Wilson's personality was in many respects the most unusual that ever inhabited the White House. In command of millions an adoration approaching worship; it aroused in others aversion mounting to hatred.

Mr. Wilson himself acknowledged he had a "strong frame of mind." Friends acknowledged he was reserved, critical and he was cold. His few intimates declared he was neither warm and jolly in acquainting him one of the most delightful of associates.

Mr. Wilson's seclusion and search for intimates were among his outstanding characteristics. He was said to have been so guarded that he never called upon any other man during his incumbency of the White House, never won a state where Mr. Wilson called him "Ed" or "Edward." Neither did Mr. Wilson call him "Colonel," the complimentary title by which Mr. House was most commonly known. Through all their intimacy up to the moment of the celebrated breaking-off point, Mr. Wilson always called him simply "House."

Grayson Closest Friend

The one enduring friendship which Mr. Wilson made in the White House was with his personal physician, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who remained with him to the end. He came into the presidency a sick man; watched over him as he would a new born baby and finally snatched him from a deathbed at the time of his breakdown and prolonged his life several years after he left the White House. They never quarreled, although their friendship was a most intimate one.

Woodrow Wilson had a way of thinking things out for himself and making his own decisions. When he was working through a crucial moment he invariably shut himself up in his study and worked the thing out on his own typewriter. He called for information when he was working toward a decision, but he preferred to have it in written form. He wanted the facts cold and untinted by the personality of the purveyor. When he got mad—and he did get mad once in a while, just as any other man—it was his favorite trick to jam on his hat and walk around the big room in the office. He would not hear the narrow margin. The result trembled in the balance three days and finally turned in his favor when California finally flipped to the democratic column by a few votes. Mr. Wilson got 277 votes in the electoral college and Mr. Hughes got 234.

Mr. Wilson actually assumed the place as commander in chief of the army and navy. He took the leading part in planning America's participation in the war. He insisted from the first for a unified command on the western front; for vigorous measures to curb the submarine menace. He boldly insisted much of the war legislation, such as the passage of the selective service law, the creation of the shipping board, the war industries board, the war labor board and a multitude of other arms of the government for carrying on the struggle. He devoted his whole being to the war, seeing nobody and thinking of nothing but the war. In his days probably were like Lincoln's.

Remained in Seclusion

It was said of Mr. Wilson that his seclusion in the White House resulted partially at least, from some misadventure. He got about Washington and its atmosphere before he took office. He was a sick man, journeyed to Princeton and told him that there was a local ring of social celebrities, bankers and others who preyed most from the prestige of association at the White House. Mr. Wilson, it was said, made up his mind to have none of this society and its atmosphere and he refused to visit its committees of bankers and railroad unions and manufacturers when he was considering public questions in which they were interested.

The result was that when Mr. Wilson moved his family to the White House, he shunned the formal state parlors on the lower floor, leaving them to the tourists and installed himself with his own family effects, including the sewing machine, on the second floor, where the Wilsons recreated their old home at Princeton. Family life on that scale continued until the death of the first Mrs. Wilson and the marriage of two of her daughters.

Mr. Wilson paid his first respects to the local aristocracy by declining an invitation to join the Chevy Chase club, the most exclusive golf, dinner and dancing organization in the city, and going across the Potomac to a small apartment in the city. He was one of his first rounds over the links he failed to hear "fore" of a local merchant, who paid his respects to him.

He was participating in making the treaty of peace in Paris, in that historic winter of 1918-1919. It would require another volume to tell the story of his diplomatic maneuvers, intrigues and dramatic moments that attended it. Publication of other at this time probably would result in the creation of Annals clubs on both sides of the Atlantic and certainly would not add to good feeling among people who are looking forward to an end of years and an era of peace.

Won Nobel Peace Prize

Woodrow Wilson himself would not wish it. When in 1920 he accepted the Nobel peace prize for being "the person who has done most for the peace of the world," he said: "The cause of peace and the cause of truth are one and the same. Whatever has been accomplished in the past is but a prelude to the future."

Woodrow Wilson lived his last years and died in "the glory of the peace of the future," confident that right as he saw it would ultimately prevail. He never lost faith in the League of Nations, but he lost faith in the human beings who were its inevitable elements.

He closed his eyes confident that as a man of letters and a president he had done his best for humanity but that his best was not all that he might have wished.

Time alone can write his epitaph.

PRES. COOLIDGE PAYS TRIBUTE

Passing of Former President is Event of Universal and Genuine Sorrow

Issues Formal Proclamation of Death of Distinguished Citizen

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—President Coolidge's proclamation on the death of Woodrow Wilson, issued yesterday, follows:

"By the president of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION

"To the people of the United States: The death of Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States from March 1, 1913, to March 4, 1921, which occurred at 11:15 o'clock today, at his home at Washington, District of Columbia, deprives the country of a most distinguished citizen and is an event which causes universal and genuine sorrow. The many of us it brings to some of a profound personal bereavement."

"His early profession as a lawyer was abandoned to enter academic life. In this chosen field he attained the highest rank as an educator, and had taught his countrymen the intellectual path of the statesman. From the president of Princeton university, he was elected by his fellow citizens to be the chief executive of the state of New Jersey. The duties of this high office he conducted as to win the confidence of the people of the United States, who twice selected him to the chief magistracy of the republic. He led the nation through the terrible ordeal of the World War with a lofty idealism which never failed him. He gave utterance to the aspiration of humanity with an eloquence which held the attention of all the earth and made America a new and enlarged influence in the destiny of mankind."

"The testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the government and the people of the United States, I do hereby direct that the flags of the White House and of the several department buildings be displayed at half-staff for a period of 30 days, and that suitable military and naval honors under orders of the secretary of the navy may be rendered on the day of the funeral.

"I shall attend the funeral of this great man on the third day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and forty-eight."

"Well, who are you?" asked Jack. "And what cave are you inviting me to enter?" "The famous Cave of the Winds," came the reply, "and I am old North Wind himself. I'm the fellow who is making all this wind out here in the open. I only rest and stop blowing when I'm inside the cave."

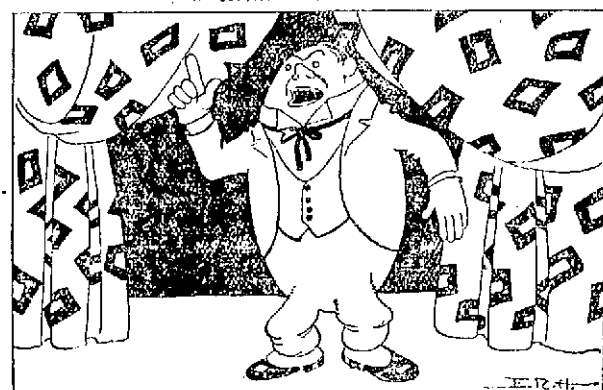

As North Wind spoke, it seemed to blow harder than ever, and Flip again started to whine. Jack knew that his dog was cold so he decided to go into the big cave. "Where is the entrance to your cave?" he asked. "Look behind you!" shouted North Wind. Jack did, and saw a big opening.

"Why, that opening wasn't there a minute ago," said the little adventurer. "Certainly not," replied North Wind. "That entrance only opens when I blow it open. And after we get inside, I'll blow it shut and you will be out of the wind." So Jack and Flip and North Wind entered. (Continued.)

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

"QUIET NOW, PLEASE!" CALLED OUT HUMPTY DUMPTY COMPOUSLY. "Another riddle! Another riddle!" cried everybody in Little Land.

"Here comes the Riddle Lady." Nancy made a curtsy and Nick made a bow and everybody else did the same. Oh, but they did like the Riddle Lady—everybody did!

"Quiet now, please!" called out Humpty Dumpty pompously. "The Riddle Lady has a new riddle to guess."

So she began at once so as not to keep them waiting: "Kerchug! Kerchug! In your little green sack So neatly buttoned straight up your back With little black buttons like little black pills Over your little green tucker with little white frills."

"Chugahug! Chugahug! With your kooky eyes, Rolling round and round as you look In your water-proof booties and stockings to match, And a bib on your chin the crumbs to catch!"

"Clumplump! Clumplump! Your tongue's a queer thing. It goes like a riddle with a very loose string. Though it's not good for music, it's a treat for a spoon."

To catch little skeeters you see, by the moon. "Chugahug! Chugahug! You'd better watch out! More kooky eyes than yours are about. And your nice little jumper and booties and socks Won't keep Mister Owl from finding your track."

"So you'd better be shutting your beady black eyes. And folding your spoon of a tongue, if you're wise, And puddle down cozy, safe in your bed, With blankets of mud pulled up over your head."

"It's a frog!" called out Jill. "I know because there are a lot of them where Jack and I go for water. But Mister Bull Frog doesn't wear a bib or booties. He wears a white satin waistcoat and green satin breeches!"

"Of course he does!" nodded the Riddle Lady. "It's just the little frogs the riddle is about. But you get the prize just to keep in your new house tucked back into Brown street. But if I were you, I'd have a wall and a pump so you won't have to carry the water so far. Then there won't be any danger of anybody falling down and breaking his crown!"

ANNIVERSARY WEEK

LOWELL DISTRICT COURT

Lowell Council of Boy Scouts
to Hold Big Public Meeting
Friday Night

Judge Enright Had Big Mon-
Dispose of Today

Beginning next Friday evening, February 8, Lowell council, Boy Scouts of America, will join in the national observance of Boy Scout anniversary week, which will extend through Thursday, the 14th. This year marks the 14th anniversary of the incorporation of the organization and Lowell council, with its 21 troops and 525 members is planning to enter heartily into the observance.

The launching of anniversary week will take place at the public meeting to be held in Liberty hall, Memorial Auditorium, Friday evening, at 7:45 o'clock, at which Mayor John J. Donovan, all members of the city council and other prominent citizens will become honorary members of Lowell council and will be presented pins of their rank by delegates from all of the local troops.

Edwin J. Stetten, Lowell Scout executive, is in charge of the anniversary week plans and has arranged a most attractive and interesting program. The speakers at the Friday night meeting will include Mayor John J. Donovan, Hugh J. Molloy, superintendent of schools, and Dr. John H. Lambert, president of Lowell council. It is expected that the 21 local troops will be present at the meeting, all in approved Scout uniform. The meeting will be public and all interested are urged to attend.

At 8:15 o'clock, in common with similar meetings being held all over the country, Lowell scouts will stand and renew their solemn obligations, which in brief are:

"In my honor I will do my best:
To do my duty to God and country and to obey the scout law;
To help other people at all times;
To keep myself physically, mentally awake and morally straight."
This is the same pledge or obligation to be taken by the public officials and others who are to become honorary members of the organization.

As a special feature of anniversary week, each scout council in the country will conduct a patriotic pilgrimage to the home, birthplace or burial place of some one of the presidents of the United States, or of some American citizen whose name has found a place in the Hall of Fame.

The Lowell council, on Saturday, will send a delegation of scouts representing each of the local troops, to the burial place of Franklin Pierce, 14th president of the United States, in Concord, N. H. Troops of nearby towns also will join in the pilgrimage and the trip will be made by motor.

Next Monday, the 11th, will be observed in the public schools as Scout day and arrangements are being made for brief exercises. At the high school all boys will be brought together in the Cyrus W. Irish auditorium and in grammar schools the exercises will be in class rooms.

CHILDREN KEEP WELL
BY TAKING FATHER
JOHN'S MEDICINE

"My three children as well as myself have taken Father John's Medicine, and we know its value for those who are thin and run down as well as for colds and coughs. I am sure that it has saved me a good deal of expense." (Signed) William Trask, Groton, Maine.

Because of its pure food contents Father John's Medicine builds health and now fresh. It is pure, wholesome food—just what those who are thin and run down need for body building. —Adv.

EAGLES' NOTICE

The next regular meeting of Lowell Eagle will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 6, at Eagles' hall, at 8 o'clock. D. G. W. President James H. Gallagher of Revere, Mass., will be our guest at this meeting.

A brand new alibi for drunkenness sprung in district court this morning won a five months' sentence for Joseph Haron, who was arrested by Officer McCann Saturday night. The bright cloth in the mill where he worked is too much for his eyes, Haron said, and so took some moonshine as a counter-irritant.

"I'll find dark cloth at the house of correction," was the ominous warning of Judge Enright who was moved to compassion by the pitiful tale of the man's wife. She first exploded his "bright cloth" alibi by saying he hasn't turned a hand to work for six months. Then she told a touching tale of want and privation and their little child ill in the hospital. Even the husband seemed brought to a deeper realization of his duties and on his promise to quit drinking and get his name on a payroll somewhere he was turned over to the probation officer for a year. Sentence of five months was suspended.

The drunkenness of a drowsy morning was never more pronounced in the gray courtroom. Every case seemed to bring out the sunny side of life and emphasize the phrase of police work that doesn't come to mind when you see one of the finest swinging jauntily along on his beat.

Karolina Golen, alias Nostek, and Frank Siya were arraigned on statutory charges. "A sad state of affairs," said the court after listening to one of the woman's three children say the defendant had "bought me clothes for a year and is very good to me." The defendants were held in $500 surety each until Saturday morning. In the meantime the police and the probation officer will collaborate in an investigation of all phases of the case.

A mother and son, Julia and Joseph Perrin, were charged with illegal liquor sale and keeping, respectively. A continuance of ten days was granted. Officers Moore, Leachy, Bagley, McKinn, Conney and Maloney raided their home in a Fayette street tenement Saturday night, finding twelve gallons of some sort of liquid, 150 empty bottles and two jugs. The mother is alleged to have resisted the intrusion of the officers after a informant is said to have made a purchase from her.

George Morel, for whom justice has been waiting since his place in Chicago street was raided some time ago, was arrested Sunday and upon arraignment today was granted a continuance until Friday morning.

James O'Neill was fined $15 and Victor Carrier and Peter Lynch $10 each, being found guilty of drunkenness. John B. Clark, charged with drunkenness, will be arraigned Thursday.

Paul J. Roane has been added to the clerical force of the purchasing agent's department and began his duties today.

A telephone alarm at 9:20 this morning called fire apparatus to 72 Andrew street where a chimney fire caused but little damage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Collins of 159 Merrimack street have left for a two-month pleasure cruise to the West Indies.

As a token of appreciation for voluntary services rendered in connection with the recent successful presentation of the musical comedy, "Let's Go," the entire cast, principals and chorus, will be tendered a testimonial banquet and dance in the council rooms next Wednesday evening.

Rose Maurer's Revue, embracing Herb Webster and wife, will be at the Empire theatre, Lawrence, the last half of the current week. John Young of this city, formerly of the Lawrence Back Pipe band, is one of the party. This act claims Lowell as its home town and hopes to play here later in the season.

The many pupils and friends of Miss Lottie Hamel, the well known teacher of piano with a studio at her home on upper Garham street, will be pleased to know that she is recuperating at the Lowell Corporation hospital after a serious operation which was performed last week. Miss Hamel is well on the road to a speedy recovery and will be pleased to meet her pupils and friends who care to come to the hospital to visit her the latter part of the week.

The condition of Herman James H. Tracy, who was injured early last week when he fell from the home wagon while responding to an alarm, is reported today at St. John's hospital as considerably improved. Considerable improvement is also noted in the condition of John C. Phil, auto accident victim, at the same hospital.

Lowell council, 21 troops, all in the city except four which are in Braintree, Chelmsford, Billerica and Trowbridge. The total membership is about 525. Five more troops now are in the process of forming, three in Lowell and two in Braintree. A troop at Trowbridge has also made inquiries relative to affiliation with Lowell council.

This year's scouting program will find membership secondary to training, although it is expected natural growth will occur. Intensive training schedules have been drawn up by Executive Melton and these will be given preference over membership drives.

LOWELL INTO HISTORY

Once more we weave a wreath for one of our dead great. Woodrow Wilson has passed. He has touched the spark that makes men live. They bury a corpse within a plot of ground, but they cannot bury a tradition. There will be a Wilson tradition! Some men live in their day and some grow great in perspective. Woodrow Wilson lived in a world beyond his day, and now he will live in a day beyond his death. He started a dream garden of world democracy and peace. He saw it produce weeds of ridicule in some spots and, in others, blades of growing hope. He died for his dream. He broke his body in the fight to spread this gospel. And in nearing the end, he said: "I am a piece of machinery—broken?" Wrinkled had grown the hand that firmly held the war-time helm—wrinkled and paralyzed. The machine was wrecked. But it had done its work.

We mourn him today—though Woodrow Wilson's name will live on. Generations yet unborn will write his name large. In his life he came to know well the taste of wormwood. So did Lincoln. He wanted love—the love of his people. In a moment of despair, he cried out to a friend: "I want people to love me, but I suppose they never will." He wanted to be thought human. Yet he saw himself termed an "intellectual machine" and a "maker of lovely phrases," whereupon he turned, almost in tears and asked: "Great God, am I not more than that?" Yes, he was more than that. The muse of history will do full justice to the ideals and achievements and even to the unattained ambitions of Woodrow Wilson.

CHISHOLM-RYAN CASE EGYPTIAN SARCOPHAGUS BEFORE MASTER

The hearing before Frederic S. Harvey as master in the disagreement between Philip Chisholm and Albert J. Ryan continued this morning at the Garham street courthouse. The litigation is the outcome of a dispute in connection with the building of two houses for Mr. Chisholm at Westford and Walker streets by Mr. Ryan as architect.

Early Morning Automobile Accident

his right eye, he showed little evidence of having been in the accident. His escape, since he is alleged to have been at the driving wheel, is regarded as miraculous.

According to his story of the accident to the police yesterday, he said he was on Kirk street and, sleeping there Saturday night, awakened about 3 o'clock in the morning. He decided to go to the home of his relatives in Chelmsford Centre. He got his machine and started home, picking up the three other passengers at various points to take them to their homes.

At a point near Foster street on Westford the snow had gathered on his windshield sufficiently to interfere with clear vision and he reached forward to swing the windshield wiper and clear off the snow, at the same time applying the service brake. As he did so the car lurched from the car tracks and skidded in a semi-circle, the rear end striking a tree. The car continued to plunge forward and came to a stop after striking an electric light pole. The impact caused the car to lose control. When he regained his consciousness he saw Garth and McBurnett lying on the car tracks on Westford street and Burkshaw in the machine with him, bleeding from cuts about the face.

Officer McDonald, Dr. Barnard L. Leonard and Dr. Marshall L. Alling heard the crash and hurried to the scene. The ambulance and police patrol were summoned and the two seriously injured men rushed to St. John's hospital. The driver of the machine and Burkshaw were treated by the two doctors, Burkshaw then being sent to his home and being placed under arrest.

The automobile was completely demolished as a result of the smash. The body of the car was torn from its frame, the top collapsed, and the run-down gear was belted out of shape. So severe was the impact that even the seat cushions were broken.

Guthrie and Belong are employed in the composing room of the Courier-Express Co.; Burkshaw is the well known druggist and McBurnett was employed by Campbell the druggist for many years and recently worked for Fred Howard.

Great Stone Coffin of King Tut Exposed for First Time in 3200 Years

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 4. (By the Associated Press) For the first time in 3200 years the great stone coffin of Tut-Ankh-Amen stood forth today in all its majesty, shorn of its protective nest of golden shrines.

The fourth casket proved, in Howard Carter's experienced hands, a less formidable problem than was first surmised, and a few hours' work yesterday sufficed to disengage the sarcophagus. Then it was seen that the enthusiasm evoked by the glimpse obtained four weeks ago of one end of the sarcophagus through the open doors of the enclosing shrines, was justified.

As massive in construction as it is chastely simple in design and as untouched by the tooth of time as it is inviolate from the hands of tomb robbers, this grandiose stone chest, gleaming pink beneath the glare of the electric lamps, must be acclaimed a unique specimen of the funerary art of the 18th dynasty.

The four crowned goddesses of death, who, in traditional posture, stand at the four corners of the coffin with wings outspread to shield the dead monarch from the forces of evil, are boldly and deeply incised—full breasted, with slender arms and powerfully winged, each with one hand grasping the "ankh" or key of life, which figures in the dead Pharaoh's name. The lid is massively solid and inscribed in bands with lines of hieroglyphics.

The sarcophagus is thought to be even larger than the massive coffin of Ramesses in an adjoining tomb, which itself is a fine specimen of 18th dynasty sculpture, roughly six feet high, five broad and seven long.

It was an emotional moment for the excavators when they first gazed upon this royal coffin, unseen by mortals since the undertakers of ancient Thebes set about their long, difficult task of enclosing the sarcophagus in its four ornate, florid casings.

For Mr. Carter the occasion was particularly poignant, for in his long years of experience in excavating many important tombs, it has never before been vouchsafed him, nor in fact any excavator in the known records of Egyptology, to gaze upon an Egyptian royal sarcophagus unscathed by pillagers and marauders.

All the members of the party now are anxiously looking forward to the solemn moment in the near future when the lid shall be raised and the mummy of Tut-Ankh-Amen exposed to view.

It is understood the excavators have all the tackle for raising the lid of the sarcophagus ready to be erected and that a start will be made in installing it as soon as the sepulchral chamber is sufficiently cleared. It is probable that considerable manual labor with hammer and chisel will be necessary to loosen the lid, as these are usually tightly cemented.

Discussions are now proceeding between the Egyptian government and the excavators, it is understood, relative to the date of the ceremonial of the opening of the coffin, which is to be attended by government officials.

JOSEPH H. RIDINGS NAMED BY DYERS

Joseph H. Ridings of the Ray State mills was elected vice president of the National Association of Textile Dyers and Finishers at a meeting Saturday in the Biltmore hotel, Providence. Samuel Scott of Lawrence was named a member of the executive committee. The association was formed by the merger of Textile Dyers, James J. Burns, of Washington, R. I., was elected president, and Frederick Babcock, of Cambridge, will be the executive secretary for the coming year. The first move of the association will be to open an employment agency, at the office of Secretary Babcock, 185 Main street, Cambridge, Mass.

WILL REAPPOINT E. W. TRULL CLERK OF DISTRICT COURT

Five-Year Term Expires on Feb. 23—Succeeded James F. Savage in 1919 When He Retired For Age—Active in Court Work Over Quarter Century

Edward W. Trull, clerk of the Lowell district court, will complete his five-year term of office on Feb. 23 next. When President Calvin Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts, he appointed Mr. Trull as clerk of court to succeed James F. Savage, who served his connection with the court on Feb. 23, 1919, under the retirement laws. Clerk Trull's appointment took effect on Feb. 23 at midnight. He has served efficiently since that time, and this morning received a wire from the state house that he will be reappointed at the expiration of his present term.

Clerk Trull has been actively identified with local court circles since July 19, 1885, when he entered the office as assistant to Clerk Savage. He was made assistant clerk in Jan. 1889. At that time, the Market street building was known as the Lowell police court, being changed to a district court by a legislative act on August 23, 1921.

During his incumbency, Mr. Trull has appointed three assistant clerks, subject to the approval of the court. On March 10, 1919, William J. Carroll resigned a position in the United States revenue service to take the position. He resigned on June 24, 1920, to go back to his former position. The second appointee was George F. Toye, who assumed his duties on July 8, 1920, and who resigned on October 21, 1922, to resume the practice of law.

The present assistant clerk is Raymond P. Bourgeois, who succeeded Mr. Toye, by appointment, on November 1, 1922.

CITY WELCOMES SNOW

Hope to Make Winter Carnival Possible on Wednesday and Thursday

Just when all but the last faint spark of hope had been abandoned, the weather man heeded the wishes of Lowell's winter carnival committee and the Sabbath morn found the streets well covered with snow, and a strong flurry in progress. Not enough snow fell during the day to make the carnival a surety, yet hopes were born and the enthusiastic carnival boosters, who plan to start their stunts stunts Wednesday, rejoiced when again this morning they found the skies had loosened more snow and promised to do a generous job.

Saturday, with the carnival but four days away, things looked pretty blue and it seemed almost certain that the carnival would meet with postponement. The program for the two day carnival, which ends with the luncheon at the Auditorium Thursday night, and the selection of a king and queen is complete in every detail. There will be horse races, a football game in the snow, sliding events, skating races and everything that makes up an A-1 carn.

One of the big features of the carnival will be the exhibition here of Walden's All-American dog team which will come down from Woonsocket, N. H., for the carnival. Chinko, magnificent lead dog of the Walden team, will head the group of huskies. Chinko, who led the team which won the international dog sled derby in 1922 and games from a strain of fast and powerful dogs.

Just snow and a bit more wintering tang to the air is all that is needed to make the carnival possible. Its success is certain if weather conditions will only favor it.

MATRIMONIAL

Mr. Francis Dziurkiewicz of Chicago, Ill., and Miss Mary E. Stankiewicz of Billerica, were married yesterday afternoon by Rev. J. P. Lesniak, pastor of the Polish National Catholic church in Lakeview avenue. The bridal couple was attended by the Misses Janna Dziurkiewicz and Josephine Stankiewicz as bridesmaids and Messrs. John Stankiewicz and Anthony Dziurkiewicz as best men. The bride wore a gown of white satin and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 123 Rangeway road, Billerica. The couple left on an extended wedding trip to Chicago and upon their return will live in this city.

POLICE TO TRY AGAIN

Will Attempt to Bring Berthold Block Here to Face Larceny Charge

Supt. Atkinson will send a police officer to New York within a day or two in an endeavor to bring back to this city Berthold Block, wanted here on a grand larceny charge in connection with several thousand dollars' worth of securities alleged to have been secured by Mrs. Clementine "Boss" of Boston in the Inter-City Trust movement.

The superintendent received word from New York yesterday that Block had been taken into custody in that city. He had previously been arrested in Chicago, but successfully fought extradition when Supt. Philip Dwyer went there to bring him back to Lowell.

WORST STORM OF THE WINTER ARRIVES

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—The worst storm of the winter from many angles swept the country from Minnesota to Texas today. With its center in Missouri, cold and wind played havoc with communications and colder weather set in in the northwest. Many cities and towns were isolated by sheet-hardened wires.

The high wind did almost as much damage as sleet and reached a velocity of 18 miles an hour in Chicago and ranged from 30 to 40 miles an hour over much of the other territory affected, which includes Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and northwestern Iowa to Texas.

The storm developed in the west last Saturday and has assumed widespread proportions in the middle Mississippi valley, although the situation is clearing up today in western Nebraska.

All telegraph wires failed between Chicago and Milwaukee and in northern Wisconsin a large strip of territory was isolated.

The coldest weather in the northwest is due to a cold wave pushing southward from Canada but it is of limited proportions, according to weather reports. Another cold wave has been sighted in Alaska, but it is several days distant from the United States and too far away for weather forecasters to predict what its effect may be.

List at Hospital—Daniel Guthrie Seriously Injured

WALTER F. McDERMOTT

As a result of an automobile accident which occurred on Westford street early yesterday morning, Walter F. McDermott of 297 Wilder street is at St. John's hospital suffering from injuries that it is believed will prove fatal. His name is on the danger list. Daniel E. Guthrie of 482 Pine street is at the same hospital suffering from numerous injuries to his head. Harold M. DeLong of Chestnut Centre and Joseph Burrows of 25 Marlborough street, the two other occupants of the machine, escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred at 6:20 o'clock yesterday morning on Westford street near Foster. DeLong is the owner of the machine and was driving it at the time of the accident. He was looking at the police station following the smash-up, charged with driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

DeLong was arraigned in district court this morning on charges of drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Through his attorney, Edward J. Grogan, a continuance was granted to February 18. DeLong furnished $100 surety. Except for a slight cut over

SEN. LODGE PAYS TRIBUTE

Joins With Sen. Robinson in Senate Eulogies of Former President

Declares Wilson, Was Man
of Remarkable Ability and
Sound Character

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Congress put aside today the bitter partisan debate which has held forth there in recent days, out of respect for the memory of Woodrow Wilson.

Both houses met at noon as usual, but it was only so that their leaders, might pay tribute to the fallen chief, and pass resolutions commensurate with his services to the nation.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the republican leader and one of Mr. Wilson's most uncompromising political foes, joined with Senator Johnson of Arkansas, the democratic leader in the senate eulogies of the former president.

"The sympathy and sorrow, and with every mark of homage," said Senator Lodge, "we stand with bowed heads in solemn recognition of this event, at once sad and magnificent, which has thus come upon us in the wisdom of the overruling Providence that guides the destinies of mankind."

"The republican leader, said republican senators had heard with profound sorrow the announcement of Mr. Wilson's death.

"In common with all the people of this country," he said, "we have felt a very deep sympathy for the sufferings of President Wilson during his long illness, which he has borne without complaint and with so much fortitude."

"Mr. Wilson was a man of remarkable ability, and of strong character."

Tewksbury Voters Want
Lower Taxes—Extra Money for Schools Refused

Economy was the watchword at the gathering of more than 350 Tewksbury taxpayers, who met at 9 o'clock this morning in the town hall, Tewksbury Center, to discuss many important community affairs, also to elect officers for the coming year and appropriate money for carrying on the town's varied business.

With a rising tax rate last year that led to much later discussion and criticism, the taxpayers gathered today appeared to be prepared for the most part to go slow on approving money appropriation in 1924 for anything except what is absolutely needed to carry on the town's regular business affairs.

The voters resolved early in the day to play the economy system to the limit. A bid for a new town school building was turned down after a long, but lively debate. The sum of between $4500 and $5000 had been asked for.

Articles calling for the appropriation of $116,000 for a new town school building and for $12,000 for building

1814—Ten Years Younger—1924

In New Home Today

Marks Ridge, 10 Central St.

While the carpenters and decorators were putting the final touches yesterday on the new Gilday quarters, busy hands were unpacking and arranging tastefully the newly arrived New York Spring fashions, frocks and gowns from these tissue wrappings, in readiness for the collecting of lovely dresses were winning favorable comment and outspoken admiration. Many selections were made by enthusiastic patrons.

The new Gilday quarters are somewhat smaller than occupied in the old store, but this upstairs shop is not only a more convenient location, but also allows overhead costs to be reduced materially. The attractive price tags on the garments must agree by appeal and convince patrons that all sales will be made on very close margins.

The easy stairway and interior of the new premises are arranged so as to conduct the business efficiently with every comfort and convenience. The decorations are very attractive, yet simple and free from extravagance. The general color scheme of ivory and rose harmonizes throughout and proven most pleasing to the eye.

This (ten years younger) firm should prosper and continue to merit the continued goodwill of its many loyal patrons.

Several Buildings Destroyed by Fire That Threatens Opera House While High School Play is in Progress

1200 Men, Women and Children Forced Out of Smoke-Filled Theatre When Flames Spread Like Mad Through Frame Building—Fire Wall Resists Flames and Keeps Fire Out of Opera House Until Audience Leaves—Stores, Club Quarters and Tenements Destroyed

One of the most dangerous fires Lowell has known in years this afternoon raged through the network of wooden buildings in Central street in which are located the Lowell Opera House, several stores, clubs and tenements and with incredible swiftness spread to all corners of the peculiarly shaped structure, extending through the entire block from Central and Gorham streets and menacing other property in the neighborhood.

Three alarms, the first shortly after 3 o'clock, called downtown every piece of apparatus in the department and a full complement of men.

As the fire developed from the little store on the ground floor where it got its start, dense volumes of smoke filtered into the Opera House where 1200 men, women and children were witnessing the matinee performance of "The Boomerang," this year's play of high school students. In perfect order the audience left the building, being assured there was no immediate danger.

As the fire worked its way upward, burning like mad through the upper floors, heavy clouds of black smoke rose hundreds of feet in the air. Suddenly a portion of the roof collapsed and there followed lurid bursts of flame which carried sparks high above surrounding property and developed a dangerous situation which called for the exercise of extreme vigilance on the part of the department.

At 4:20 o'clock the flames had forced their way into the Opera House proper. The building is owned by Thomas Hennessey. It is assessed for about $9000, but there is no way to estimate the property loss, which is bound to mount up to a great amount.

Second and Third Alarms

A huge crowd gathered quickly and police reserves were rushed to the scene. Fire lines were established at Appleton street and all Central and Gorham street traffic was stopped there.

As the second and third alarm apparatus arrived, the fire was momentarily threatening to break into the Opera House proper, around which the rambling structure is built. A fire wall on the south side stoutly resisted all attempts of the flames to leap through, but on the north side an ordinary partition let some of the fire get in back of the balcony and gallery.

A maze of hose lines filled Central street and apparatus was stationed as far away from the scene as Tower's corner and on the other side of the building in Gorham street.

Firemen in Danger

With the thermometer standing only at 17 degrees above zero the danger was increased in ice as the water from bursting hose pipes froze as it drenched their garments. A frozen film covered the street as huge volumes of water poured down gutter and overflowed into the roadway. Flying glass was a source of danger and time after time ladders raised against the building had to be moved when their tops began to burn with the building.

The fire was tremendously hard to fight, due to the absence of open spaces except as the building fronts

SHOW POSTPONED

Tonight's performance of the High school show, "The Boomerang," has been postponed on account of the fire. The show will be presented later, either at the Opera House or High school hall. The definite date and place to be announced later.

on Central street. There was no way for the firemen to fight the flames from either end and the narrow street offered a further handicap.

In the early stages of the fire a great many parked automobiles in Central street hampered the free use and placement of fire apparatus, but these were soon moved out of the way.

Those Lines Burst

Several hose lines in front of the building burst when pressure from pumping engines forced water through them, one or two of the breaks being so bad that new hoses had to be laid to replace them. Another handicap was the late arrival of the horse-drawn aerial ladder truck from the Palmer street station, due to one of the horses falling in front of the Strand theatre in response to the first alarm. No ladder truck arrived before this one could be again put in motion.

Although the fire ate its way into the Opera House at 1:15 o'clock it had not reached the scenery or stage. All papers and office equipment were removed, but the lobby was suffering considerably and the entire house is water-soaked.

TENANTS SUFFER BIG LOSS FROM FIRE

Tenants of the building who were either burned out entirely or suffered great damage from fire, smoke and water were the following:

Lowell opera house.
Crawford Barber Supply Co.
South End Smoke Shop.
South End club.
Victor Tailors.
Peter Mathias, tailor.
Armenian club.
Portuguese club.

FUNERAL SERVICES WILL BE HELD WEDNESDAY

War-Time President Will Sleep for a Time in Stone Vault Within Great Cathedral Rising on Hills That Look Down Over Washington—Claims of Nation to Show Him Lavish Honors Must Be Denied—Funeral Wednesday Will Be As Simple As Last Years of Life—Tributes From All Parts of World—Friends and Foes Join in Unstinted Eulogies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—Woodrow Wilson will sleep for a time in a stone vault within the great cathedral rising on the hills that look down over Washington from the westward. And while he rests there, men who acclaim his memory will take counsel together as to the manner and place of his last sepulchre.

The hard decision was made today by those who loved him best. Word came from Dr. Grayson, as friend and spokesman for the sorrowing widow and family, that the claims of the nation to show him lavish honors, must be denied. His funeral next Wednesday will be as simple as his last years of life.

Tributes from Friend and Foe

While this plan was in the making, a great tide of tribute to his courageous spirit and lofty purposes was rolling in from around the world. His death had loosed men's tongues to speak their admiration even as it stirred the already dimming clamor of criticism that beat about him when his hands still firmly gripped the powers of the presidency. From friend and foe in the harsh days of the past and from those who still oppose some of the tenets of his faith, came generous, unstinted tribute to the high idealism that had ruled the heart and mind of him whose death they mourned.

Great American is Dead

A great American is dead, and in death the bickering and tragedies of misunderstanding and cross purposes have been swept away in a flood of tribute to his greatness of heart and to his service to his country in its hour of sorry trial.

Messages of sympathy poured in on Mrs. Wilson from every foreign capital. They rang with something of the spirit that had ruled among the allied powers in the grim war years, when the dead man stood like a rock of refuge, yielding his great powers to save civilization; they recalled the hours when he voiced the yearnings of humanity for lasting peace; when he spoke a vision of hope into the years of hate-ridden peoples.

At home also, the chorus of recognition and admiration swelled high. It entered in the senate and house, not only to eulogize the dead and from there spread down through all walks of American life. Here in Washington, men who met casually on the street, laid aside their every day affairs for a moment to speak of him. History's estimate of Woodrow Wilson was in the making.

Plans for Funeral

Plans for the funeral on Wednesday are brief. Two religious services will be held. The first will be at the quiet home on S street, and very few even of the limited circle of intimate friends will share in that. There is room for few, besides the family and nearest relations. The time has been set tentatively for 3 p. m., and the service will take less than half an hour. The Central Presbyterian church, where Mr. Wilson worshipped, and the Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton, N. J., whose church he attended in the days of his quiet life as a college president, will conduct the simple rites of the Presbyterian faith for the dead.

A large number of friends and former associates will be designated as active and honorary pallbearers. Among them are: Bernard M. Baruch, Vance McCord, Cleveland H. Dodge, Cyrus McCormick, some of the members of Mr. Wilson's war-time cabinet, and others. (Continued to Page 14)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Congress today stilled the turmoil over the leasing of the naval oil reserves to pay its tribute to Woodrow Wilson.

The senate oil investigating commission, whose authority to question him further under the resolution authorizing the inquiry, was challenged Saturday by Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior at the time he oil leases were arranged, will not meet until tomorrow. It had decided to ask the senate for readoption of the resolution today but this plan necessarily was changed and leaders of the measure announced that the session called for tomorrow would be a brief one, adjourning to await action on its request for renewal of its authority.

Ex-President Wilson Passed From Life While He Slept

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press.) Woodrow Wilson has found in eternity a haven from the storms and sorrows of a troubled world. In the prayerful quiet of a Sunday morning, death folded him gently in its embrace and bore him to his Maker.

He passed from life while he slept, with those he loved best close about him. His broken body had weakened little by little until the last spark of his vitality went out. But his spirit was supported to the last by the indomitable courage of the old fighting days. In his last wakeful moments, he told his loved ones that he knew the end had come, and was ready.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY" TO BE PRESENTED HERE

Colin O'More, the brilliant young American tenor to appear this season as a star in the de-lux presentation of the opera, "Madame Butterfly," to be given here by the famous San Carlo Grand Opera company on Feb. 18 at the Auditorium, has travelled a hard road to success, a path that has been fraught with hardships and many bitter disappointments. Beginning life in a small western town, the son of a physician, he showed an early leaning toward a musical career by his fondness for the piano when still a little lad. At sixteen he was sent to the Cincinnati College of Music, to study this instrument, but before long his vocal gifts became apparent, and the last three years of the college were devoted almost entirely to the voice. At twenty-one he was graduated in both voice and piano, turning this early period he also brought forth several compositions.

The opportunity to study with the great tenor, Jean de Reszke, now deceased, came before him and during the next three years he found O'More in Paris studying opera and the art of French song with the celebrated master. As a direct result of this, O'More has been placed in the front rank as a singer of French chansons, his diction and phrasing being considered by such eminent authorities as Edmond Clement, Mme. Georgette LeBlanc and Dame Nellie Melba, as among the finest on the concert platform today.

Mr. O'More now left de Reszke and went to Italy to study the Italian language, and incidentally to make his operatic debut, as it afterwards turned out. A year passed, and then he went to London, where he gave his first recital and filled many engagements.

Thomas W. Gregory, attorney general in the Wilson cabinet, who was originally selected to serve as the democratic member of the special counsel, conferred with the president yesterday and handed him a letter explaining that in his telephone conversations with the White House prior to the announcement of his appointment, he had not understood he was accepting and Mr. Coolidge confirmed the inference he had drawn.

The former attorney general said he had not known, until he read Bohlen's testimony, that his interests had paid part of the fee he received as counsel from the Island Oil Co., and that he had never had any connection, directly or indirectly, with the California oil magnate, and that if he had been aware of this, the matter of his appointment as one of the oil counsel for the government would have ended at once because "it would have disqualified me" from acting.

RED SOX RELEASE PITCHER BOONE

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—The release of Pitcher J. A. Boone to the Mobile club of the Southern baseball league, was announced today by President Walter Johnson of the Boston American league club.

Boone, a right handed pitcher, was purchased from the Cleveland club last month in an exchange deal which brought into the Red Sox catcher Steve O'Neill, Second baseman William Wambach and Outfielder Connolly. George Burns, first baseman, and Al Waters, catcher, went to Cleveland in the exchange.

Mr. Johnson, it was said, had been inclined to release both Boone and Connolly. George Burns, first baseman, Cleveland transaction was to secure O'Neill and Wambach. Boone has been given to the Mobile club, the announcement added in return for a number of Red Sox men recruited from that club last fall.

Sen. Lodge Pays Tribute

Through laborious years of thought and study, he devoted himself to securing a mastery of the historical subject, the economic questions and the theory and science of politics and government which commanded his special interest. He rose to be president of the ancient and honored university of which he was a graduate. From this high place in the field of education, he turned to public life. He was elected to be governor of New Jersey, one of the 13 original states, eminent in our history, and on the soil of which so many of the battles of the revolution were fought. He was then selected and re-elected president of the United States which is to us and which I believe to be the greatest office among men.

"During his period of service in the presidency came the war with Germany, the most terrible war from which mankind has suffered during the period of recorded history. After the victory of the allied and associated powers it fell to Mr. Wilson to rise, the leading part in the unspeakably difficult work of making peace. He stood there a chief figure in this great transaction and he will stand in the pages of history in the days that are to come. There is no figure more conspicuous than his in the events of that time, which closed one period in the history of mankind and opened another. Here in the capital of the country, the scene of his many triumphs, this remarkable career comes to an end."

Senator Robinson's Tribute

Senator Robinson said the announcement that former President Woodrow Wilson had passed away caused grief throughout the civilized world.

"His departure," he said, "marks the end of an era which has been marked by his achievements."

"As the leader of our country in its greatest crisis, he is passing into history with opinion divided as to the wisdom of some of his foreign policies. When confusion has given place to calm conviction, he must take high place among the benefactors of all the great peoples of his civilized world. Neither eulogy nor defamatory material can influence the estimation in which he will be held by future generations. It is unavoidable either to unduly applaud or to unduly depreciate what he has done and what he has tried to do. Whichever path we take, he is easily recognized as the greatest man of his time."

"Men are not always judged alone by what they do; they are some times also judged by what they try to do. One thing is certain. In the years to come, if war shall again desolate the earth, and the millions of this hemisphere be called to fight for a bloody strife, all they who fight and they who sorrow, will remember and bless Woodrow Wilson because he gave himself in an earnest effort to deliver them from the heritage of war. The final judgment of mankind will be fair. In spite of efforts to pervert it, America there has been a peasant of his nobility and this will gather volume as the years go by."

"Leaders in great crises do not depend on favor or renown. Earnestness is indeed the path of immortality, and all they who tread that way are certain of enduring fame."

"In the solemn presence of death, we behold the evidences of tender sympathy and universal grief. Tears, tolling bells and heartfelt prayers throughout a grief-stricken land inspire appreciation for his hopes and his dreams—dreams of peace on earth and good will toward men."

"SCOTTY" MANZO SHOT—WIFE HELD

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 4.—James Manzo, 36, known as Scotty, and under aliases of Santopoli and Stamboli, in Philadelphia, Brooklyn and here, was shot fatally here this morning. His wife, Mrs. Mary Manzo, 36, of 115 Columbia avenue, Boston, was arrested charged with the shooting. Manzo was under $10,000 bail in an assault with a dangerous weapon case, in connection with a shooting here in December last. He died in a hospital after making a statement to the coroner.

ANNIVERSARY MASS.—In loving memory of my husband, Martin W. Halloran, who departed this life Feb. 4, 1921, an anniversary high mass be celebrated at the Immaculate Conception church, Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock.

MRS. ANNIE M. HALLORAN.

In addition to the Foster school, were laid on the table temporarily.

Articles calling for the expenditure of $1500 for a new fire truck and also for $1200 with which to purchase enough hose to extend to the Tewksbury fire department up to a higher standard of efficiency, were also tabled, the voters desiring to postpone action until more taxpayers could be on hand and participate in formal discussions.

Atty. Melvin G. Rogers, moderator of many Tewksbury town meetings, was elected unanimously to the office. He received numerous congratulations upon his "rejuvenation."

In this, our third annual report, we wish to call the voters' attention to the need of a lowering of our tax burdens. We believe that the town needs better fire protection, but that the only thing we can afford to do is by a lowering of the present tax burden, and we therefore recommend a committee of five, one from each part of the town, be given authority to go over the town and discontinue all unnecessary lights. We believe that by becoming light thrusters on corners, railroad crossings and curves, a saving of practically one-half can be made.

The town fathers today asserted emphatically that the Lowell Electric light corporation was "stealing too much money" yearly from Tewksbury taxpayers through extensions of public service. Leading town officials declared that where street lights were ordered to be extended, the company declined to pay for the poles or setting the poles, compelling the town to pay all the bills except running the wires after the right of way had been prepared.

The taxpayers are also fighting strenuously over the electric light charges. More than $5000 was paid to the Lowell concern last season and the citizens say it is $3000 more than the town of Tewksbury can afford.

Today action was to be taken on the Tewksbury finance committee's recommendations on 1924 town finances, as follows:

The official reports were all accepted in order printed in the town report, copies of which were distributed today to the taxpayers. The total valuation of the town in 1923 was $2,253,220.00, a net gain over the year 1922 of $14,714.00. The tax rate last year was $28.70 on $1000. The state tax was $2,210; the state highway tax was $1,237.20; special state and county tax, $252.51; county tax, $3,340.04.

The finance committee report, handed to each voter on large letters sheets printed on one side only, contained many new features. The recommendations were, briefly as follows:

Street lighting, $2500; incidentals, $1000; highways, $10,000; schools, $10,000 and unexpended balance, $10,000; police, $1500; cost of health, $200; stationery and printing, $500; salaries, $2000; park commission, $175; fire department, $2000; fire department, $2000; town hall, $3500; assessors, $200; vocational school, $400; inspector of meats and animals, $400; and state and military, $500; interest on loans, $2700.

The voters were asked to purchase a new chemical fire engine, motorized. The fire engineers can purchase one for $2500, and the town can sinking an exhibit in front of the town hall today this noon after the voters had dinner.

A. B. Moore, representing the Sons of Veterans; Joseph Jordan the American Legion; Albert C. Blair, the Spanish War Veterans and Gen. McElbert, representing the A. O. U. M. W. Moderators Rogers to act as a committee to expend $250, voted today, for the proper observance of Memorial day this year.

Gen. Ames is the only surviving veteran of the Civil war living in Tewksbury today.

An attempt to buy a caterpillar tractor for use in the town, and only town roads, failed this morning, after Chairman John T. Dale of the highway commission, John Trull and George W. Trull, Mr. Stoddard and Harry C. Dawson debated the question. The expenditure called for did not meet the approval of many voters and the article was indefinitely postponed, after Mr. Dale gave the voters some first-hand facts on snow-fighting with four horses and plows.

Applause greeted Commissioner Dale's statement, that Tewksbury roads during the severe snowstorms of last year were kept open in better shape than was the case in any other town in the state.

The town will appropriate money to be used in the suppression of the pyre and brown tail moths next year, expenditure not to be made before Feb. 1 next and the money to be raised in the tax levy of 1925.

Balancing for town officers started at 9 o'clock. Many women attended the polls in the morning, casting ballots regularly even during the interminable session of the voters. Town officials expected a record vote for town officers. The contests are few, but interest centers in the campaign for constable between Benjamin Buck, A. H. Jewell, A. G. Kelley and E. J. Walsh; also the fight for highway commissioner, with Harry C. Dawson, Charles W. Fenerty and Mark Boyer in the running.

There are four candidates for assessor—J. J. Clendinning, K. Chandler, Irving F. French, John T. Dale and William H. Kelley. The voters are balloting also on the annual question covering the sale of non-intoxicating beverages.

The farmers' dinner enjoyed by the voters was served by the members of the Ladies Aid society of the Congregational church, Mrs. Frederick A. Briggs, chairman.

Students at Harvard are raising bees in order to get the sugar out of flowers that is ordinarily wasted.

BUBBLE, BUBBLE, TOIL AND TROUBLE

CLAIM OF POSTAL CLERKS FOR HIGHER WAGES

If only as a means for the preservation of the moral and esprit de corps of the postal department, a wage raise is justified in the opinion of Senator David I. Walsh, junior senator from Massachusetts. Speaking on the subject before the senate, Mr. Walsh pointed out that demoralization is now threatened. Continuing, he said: "Only a fine spirit of public service and the conviction that congress would soon readjust the present miserably unfair wages has prevented a condition of affairs which would seriously cripple the postal service."

"As it is, the labor turnover in the clerical branch of this service is larger than in any other branch of the government."

"The postal carrier has to face all kinds of weather, bear the responsibility of being charged with an important trust, and collect the physical strain of carrying a heavy pack while traveling his route day after day, year in and year out. For all this the postal service pays a minimum of $26.92 and a maximum of $34.61 per week after three years. These salaries make it increasingly difficult to recruit capable postal employees. We cannot afford to let the postal service deteriorate, for delay, insecurity and

Commander Collin Macdonald of Lowell Post, 87, of the American Legion, announced last night that in conjunction with the movement being made all over the country by veterans to secure adjusted compensation, a meeting of the legion in this city would be held tonight to discuss plans for securing the support of the general public in the fight against the big, financial organizations that are fighting to prevent the passage of friendly legislation.

He declared that the American Legion is holding its own in the fight going on in Washington at the present time, in spite of the fact that many corporations in the country are requesting their employees to send in letters protesting the passage of the bill. A meeting of the executive committee will be held tonight at 7:15, followed by a regular meeting of the post at 8 o'clock, at which the question will be discussed.

"The very efficient postmaster of Boston, Mr. Roland M. Baker, recently made an investigation as to the cost of living for a postal employee with a small family—not over four persons. The result of that investigation shows that the monthly expenditures amounted to $263, while the maximum salary is $150 per month."

The Kelly bill, known as H.R. 4123, provides for revision to the following scale: First grade, $2200; second grade, $2250; third grade, $2300; first grade special clerk, $2500; second grade special clerk, $2550; substitute clerks, 80 cents an hour. There are a few of the reasons cited by the postal employees in support of their claims for more money:

1.—The postoffice employees are skilled workers rendering services vitally necessary to the public.

2.—Their pay, almost entirely, comes from postal service earnings and not from taxation.

3.—Postal service earnings are greatly curtailed because rates of postage, which are in reality postal labor costs, have remained stationary during a period when other costs have soared.

4.—The two-cent stamp of today buys more service (labor) for postal patrons than forty years ago. A unique record in these days of soaring labor costs.

5.—Postal employees are justly entitled to share in their greater productivity. To deny them this right is to insult the government as an employer.

6.—There is a larger labor turnover in the clerical branch of the postal service than any other branch of government employment, due largely to unattractive wage and working standards.

7.—The wage of the postoffice employee should insure him:

(a) Comfortable living quarters.

(b) Good, healthful food with an occasional chance to enjoy delicacies.

(c) Enough good clothing for most purposes.

(d) The chance for the wife to buy enough mechanical and physical aid to relieve housework of much of its drudgery.

(e) The means to buy books, go to the theatre, and give the children adequate education.

(f) At least a limited amount of recreation.

(g) Some insurance and a little fund of savings.

8.—Low wages are more costly than high wages. A high standard of postal pay means a more dependable postal service, the value of which cannot be calculated. Higher postal pay, therefore, is a sound investment for the American people.

CATHOLIC CHURCH NEWS

Blessing of Throats Yesterday in Observance of Feast of St. Blaise

The blessing of throats in observance of the feast of St. Blaise took place in the Catholic churches of the city yesterday. This feast annually follows Candlemas day, the throats of the faithful being blessed with candles dedicated the previous day.

In St. Patrick's church yesterday, the blessing of throats took place after each mass. It was announced that the university extension course in oral English and parliamentary law will begin tomorrow evening; the candidates to meet in the hall of St. Patrick's school at 5 o'clock. The class will be in charge of Mrs. Elizabeth L. McNamara of Cambridge who is working under the direction of the state department of education.

Next Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock holy hour service will be held.

The Holy Rosary sodality of the Immaculate Conception church received communion at the 8 o'clock mass yesterday. The high mass at 11 o'clock was celebrated by Rev. John Duffy, O. M. L., while the sermon was delivered by Rev. William A. Robbins, O. M. L.

Very Rev. Daniel J. Keicher, P. M. L., was the celebrant of the 7:30 o'clock mass at St. Peter's church yesterday, at which members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. The blessing of throats took place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and at 4:30 o'clock in the evening.

The regular meeting of the Married Ladies' sodality will be held Wednesday evening of this week at 7:30 o'clock.

The Holy Rosary sodality of the Church of the Sacred Heart received communion in that church at the 7:30 o'clock mass yesterday. The newly-augmented chancel choir sang impressively at the high mass.

There will be a special meeting of the Holy Rosary sodality Wednesday evening. A social will be held under the auspices of this sodality at a date to be announced later.

The minstrel show of the Sacred Heart Social club will be held on Feb. 29 in the school hall.

The new St. Michael's school in Sixth street was open to public inspection yesterday afternoon and was visited by many admiring parishioners.

St. Michael's Charity guild, Rev. Jas. E. Lynch, spiritual director, will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. Confessions for the public school girls will be held next Saturday afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock. They will receive communion at the 8 o'clock mass next Sunday.

At the high mass yesterday, Rev. Alphonse G. Madden delivered a forceful sermon on "The Power of God." The St. Blaise blessing was given yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The blessing of St. Blaise was administered in St. Mary's church at 7 o'clock last night. Regular order of services was observed in the morning; the masses being celebrated by Rev. William P. Brennan, Rev. Andrew F. O'Brien and the pastor, Rev. Charles F. Galtigan.

The pastor, Rev. John J. Powers, celebrated the 7 and 11 o'clock masses in St. Columba's. The 10 and 11 o'clock masses were celebrated by Rev. Thomas J. Galtigan. The blessing of throats took place at 2:15 in the afternoon and at the conclusion of benediction in the evening.

Holy hour service will be held Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

At the 7:30 o'clock mass at St. Joseph's church last night, which was celebrated by Rev. Andrew Baron, O. M. L., the members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. Rev. Fr. Baron also delivered the sermon at that and at the 9 and 10:30 o'clock masses. He discussed at length the sodality of the church in its low making, explaining the various degrees of its significance on the part of the faithful to do them. Rev. Louis A. Nolan, O. M. L., celebrated the 8 o'clock mass and also sang the high mass at 10:30 o'clock.

The members of the League of the Sacred Heart received communion at a

THE KNIGHTS OF SIR GALAHAD

"The Boy and the Church" was the subject of the address by F. W. Lincoln at St. Anne's church last evening.

The talk was given in connection with the organization of the Knights of Sir Galahad, an order which it is proposed to form among the boys of the church. He stated that in 120 of the 200 parishes of which he is the boys' work director, the Sir Galahad movement has been organized and proved successful by giving the boys an ideal to work for, instilling religion into their lives and giving them a wholesome outlook on life. The boys need the church and the church needs the boys and the movement is founded to give them something of their own.

The regular service was conducted by Rev. Appleton Grannis, assisted by Rev. F. S. Hunt. Several violin solos were played by Alessandro Niccolini, who also assisted the choir and the Guild of St. Cecilia in the services.

An occasional dose of
SYRUP PEPSIN
Keeps young girls fit

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. Mary Keller of 132 Benton St., Sisterville, W. Va., was perplexed about her daughter until her own druggist told her they used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at his house, and she did likewise. Miss Irene Mazierska of 90 Peter St., Buffalo, N. Y., is glad her attention was called to Syrup Pepsin.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. Keep Syrup Pepsin in your medicine chest.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

LOOKS LIKE THE MAJOR IS BRINGING HOME ANOTHER GATE CRASHER

BURNS PROVED FATAL

Woman Burned in Her Home in Salem Street Dies at Hospital

Miss Nellie Doherty, aged 55 years and crippled, received burns in her home, 215 Salem street, yesterday morning that resulted in her death in the early afternoon at the Lowell Corporation hospital, where she had been removed for treatment.

Miss Doherty lived with her two sisters. While the sisters were at church yesterday morning she attempted to move something on the stove and as a result her clothing caught fire. Her screams raised neighbors in the same house and they broke into the house and found her in the kitchen with her clothing ablaze.

While several neighbors extinguished the flames, heavy calls were sent in to the ambulance and fire department and an alarm sounded from box 129. Upon the arrival of the ambulance it was seen that Miss Doherty's injuries were serious and she was removed to the Lowell Corporation hospital. The ambulance arrived at about the same time the ambulance did, but had their run for nothing as the fire had not spread to the building.

Dr. Marshall L. Althum, medical examiner, viewed the body yesterday afternoon and announced that death was due to accidental causes.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Miss Lillian Desmond and William Morrison have the leading roles in "The Plague Question," timely play to be presented this week by Al Lutzinger's stock players at the Lowell Opera House. The opening performance will be given tomorrow afternoon, the high school players having the use of the house this afternoon and evening. Tickets may be purchased at the box office at the box office any time this evening. The advance sale, which started last Wednesday, has been heavy.

Mr. Morrison will play the part of Dr. Dore and the part of his sister, Marie, will be played by Miss Desmond. Richard Morgan will have the part of the priest and Malcolm Anderson and Edna Earl Andrews will play the estranged pair. John Howe will inject the comedy as usual. He has the part of the church caretaker and depicts an old Irishman just bickering with Mary. Jack Ravold will have a detective's part. Miss Fern Chandler, the ingenue, is well cast.

The play is one of vital interest and importance at this time. It is a serious drama with just enough comedy relief to keep it from becoming too sad.

It is a story that appeals to both men and women alike and teaches a great lesson.

The play is given in one act, the scenery of a little Catholic church, Miss Desmond, daughter of the escaped convict and a sister of Dopey Doe, has a highly emotional role that will bring forth her best talents. Mr. Morrison has played this character before and gives a remarkable performance. Miss Desmond plays the part of a cheap dancer hall singer who has had quite a tussle making her way in life, due solely to the separation of her parents when she was not a tender age. The play has its sad parts, but it also is bright in spots. All in all it comes up as a great contribution to the spoken drama. The Lutzinger players have rehearsed faithfully under the vigilant eye of Mr. Ravold and are certain to give their usual highly creditable performance.

There will be a special Friday matinee, making ten performances in all this week. Choice seats are being disposed of rapidly and phone reservations should be made by those who wish to be certain that they will see the play. The box office phone number is 251.

CAPT. O'HAY TO SPEAK TO ANNOUNCE NAME OF PEACE WINNER

Secretary Manager George E. Wells of the chamber of commerce today announced that he has secured Capt. Irving O'Hay, U. S. Army, retired, as speaker for the membership luncheon to be held in Liberty hall on Feb. 19. Capt. O'Hay is a colorful, interesting speaker with a great deal of personal experience to draw from. He is truly the "Soldier of Fortune" depicted by Richard Harding Davis in the great work of that name by the late novelist. Capt. O'Hay, who could call himself General O'Hay, has had a life crisscrossed full of excitement, fun and adventure. He has been in any number of minor wars and revolutions, has fought for many causes, some of them pretty hazy and indistinct. He has an ingratiating personality and is the sort that "wins" well. His humor is of the wholesome, sparkling sort that never fails to win his auditors.

Capt. O'Hay has appeared before the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and other large bodies and has never failed to score as a big success.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS IN CHELMSFORD

Lively interest centres today in the annual Chelmsford town election, officers being voted for at the various village precincts to serve during the coming year. The polls were open at 12 o'clock this noon and will remain open until 8 o'clock tonight.

The polling places are as follows: Precinct 1, Centre town hall, precinct 2, North town hall, precinct 3, Highland hall, West Chelmsford, precinct 4, schoolhouse, East Chelmsford.

Three contests on the official ballot are attracting attention in this hottest of recent town election polls. Wm. J. Quigley, present member of the board of assessors, is being opposed by Jas. P. Dunnigan, former incumbent, who desires to come back.

The school committee battle promises to be a war of one also. John McKeown of the Westlands section, Chas. Clough and Henry A. Bunch of the Centre are new candidates. For the health board, Abbot L. Emery, now completing a three-year term, is being opposed by Elliphail Brown of Westlands.

The pre-election campaign has been the hottest in the history of Chelmsford from many viewpoints. Mr. Dunnigan, aiming to quash Mr. Quigley's aspirations, has been conducting a very vigorous campaign and, according to reports, has a strong following in his home village. Dunnigan also claims many supporters in the East and West Chelmsfords, and expects to win.

The Quigley forces are not worrying. With three years to his credit and supported by many citizens who have followed his work closely, the candidate for re-election, backed by his loyal followers, is confident of defeating Dunnigan.

The officers being voted for in Chelmsford today are, as follows: Moderator, Walter Perham; town clerk, Harold Pettersen; selectman, George Rigby; treasurer and collector of taxes, Ervin W. Sweetser; constable, Fred J. Vinal; library trustees, Albert Davis, A. Hardy Park and Louis L. Snow; park commissioner, Fred L. Fitcher; overseer of the poor, George Rigby.

A meeting of the Chelmsford finance committee will be held this evening at the Centre town hall at 7:30 o'clock to hear any registered voters who are interested in any article in the warrant for the annual town meeting, to be held on Monday, Feb. 11.

WISS TRIP TO NEW YORK

Joseph Smith of 175 Hall street was the winner in the drawing contest at Associate hall on Saturday night and as a result he will be a member of the party of fifteen to enjoy a trip to New York at the expense of the Associates' hall management. Seven other names were drawn before Mr. Smith's was pulled out of the glass jar, all others being absent and consequently ineligible to compete. Miss Ida Bradley was chosen to draw the names.

CAUGHT WITH BIG SUPPLY OF LIQUOR

Joseph Moran, a former taxicab driver, was arrested by federal and municipal officers in Lawrence yesterday, charged with violating the liquor law. Seven can bottles of liquor valued at $200 were seized. The driver was being trucked to Moran's home at the time it was seized. It bore Canadian government stamps and seals and is believed to have just arrived from the border domain.

HAIL RECOGNITION OF SOVIET BY BRITAIN

Moscow, Feb. 4.—The bolshevik press hails the extension of recognition by Great Britain to the soviet government not so much as an act of good will on the part of the new labor government in London as the inevitable result of the soviet success. All the newspapers declare it is of the utmost importance, internationally paricularly with reference to what they have long considered inevitable differences between France and England. X. Stokhoff, editor of Izvestia, expresses the opinion that the British step undoubtedly will have an influence upon the United States' policy toward Russia, despite American statements to the contrary.

INVENTOR PREDICTS BETTER COMMUNICATION WITH ANTENNAE STUCK INTO GROUND

DR. JAMES H. ROGERS TESTING HIS UNDERGROUND ANTENNAE

By HAROLD B. WATSON
N.E.A. Service Writer
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Put a hole in your back yard and place your radio "aerial" in it. If you would be up to date!

That is, of course, assuming that Dr. James H. Rogers, famous inventor, has proved his theory. Some time ago he started experimenting with underground antennae. Today Dr. Rogers, freely predicts that underground transmission is considerably less than for aerial.

Dr. Rogers reveals that perfect communication was carried on with points 200 miles away, during experiments he conducted. Interference, he declares, is practically eliminated, difficulties of day reception are reduced to a minimum and the power required for transmission is considerably less than for aerial antennae.

One of Dr. Rogers' underground sets consists of a loop antenna let down into a metal lined and metal covered well. He has practically abandoned his high strung aerial on the roof of his laboratory, nightly hearing foreign stations on his submerged set.

Radio Broadcasting
Dr. Rogers believes underground transmission to be an important development in radio science, and predicts it will make possible the concentration of broadcasting at a group of powerful stations.

"These stations," he believes, "will be located at strategic points over the country. Reception will be clear and strong in every way, interference being eliminated. The stations will operate something like a telephone switchboard, tuning in for the programs they desire to re-broadcast in their vicinity."

"Communication with trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific points will be among the usual things. But all of this will come only through underground and submarine transmission," Dr. Rogers says.

Aerial Problems
While Dr. Rogers thus would eliminate the weaknesses of radio communication, other inventors are continuing their attempts to perfect aerial transmission.

One of the tasks before the radio division, bureau of standards, is to eliminate fading and to devise means to combine broadcasting to its particular wave-length. Once this is done the aerial should enjoy as clear and strong reception as Dr. Rogers claims for the underground apparatus.

RIALTO THEATRE

The biggest theatrical attraction in a decade. That's "Human Wreckage," which opens at Rialto's Radio Theatre today. "Human Wreckage" comes to Lowell with a record of being the greatest box office attraction that the screen has ever done. In all the big cities at $250 top, it has jammed the 3000 seat houses to capacity week in and week out. And surely there must be a reason why this picture is such a tremendous success. "Human Wreckage" has the endorsement of many great people, among whom are Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, James J. Davis, secretary of labor, Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, Governor William C. C. Cox of our own state, and most of the mayors of the big cities where this picture has already been shown. Never before in the history of the screen has a picture received such universal commendation. It has been hailed by the press, pulpit and public as one of "the most important pictures ever made." Despite the fact that the Rialto management has secured this picture at an enormous rental, there will positively be no advance in prices. It is announced. Many different types of pictures have been shown in Lowell all the while, but it is doubtful if there was any one of them that carried the powerful message that "Human Wreckage" conveys. The forcefulness of it beggars description and it really ought to be seen to be appreciated. It is your last opportunity to see this picture and don't be one of those who will be sorry to have missed it!

Mrs. Wallace Reid, who appears in the picture in a leading role, is supported by a capable cast which includes James Kirkwood, Jessie Love and a host of other notable stars. "Human Wreckage" is not the life story of the famous actor, Wallace Reid. It tells a straightforward story and expresses the done evil in a manner which leaves nothing to the imagination. It will grip, thrill and amaze you. It is part of life itself—life lived!

THE STRAND

"Black Oxen," the story by Ruth Arlinton which created such a stir during 1923, and which has been the "best seller" of the past year, has been adapted for the screen and is being presented during the first part of the week at The Strand. Cornelia Griffith and Conway Tearle, appearing in the stellar roles and their support includes some of the screen's most popular stars. "Black Oxen" is a revelation of present day society. The story of the famous actor, Wallace Reid, and his principal female character is Countess Zlatkova, a 35 year old former New York society belle who is a favored and made to look and act like a young woman of 20. Mrs. Griffith portrays this role and her work is said to be wonderfully good. Elaborate wardrobe are attractions for the women folk. "You Are In Danger" with Pauline Stark and Carmel Myers, and "Inside the House of David" are the other features. Don't miss this big bill.

MERRIMACK SQUARE

Undoubtedly the greatest picture in which Jackie Coogan has been permitted to use his remarkable genius is the feature at the Merrimack Square Theatre. Last night its premier in this city was attended by a great and appreciative audience which through the evening continued to give ample evidence of the tremendous popularity which Jackie now has at his command. In fairness to him it is such beautiful and impressive productions as "Long Live the King" that enhance his popularity and make him more beloved.

The story of "Long Live the King" is a familiar one to readers of American books. It is a screen version of the famous novel of the same name written several years ago by Mary Roberts Rinehart and which attained a tremendous sale. It hinges around the romantic adventures of the little prince of Lavinia—a country threatened at every turn by revolution and anarchy. It is highly exciting romance and the producers have not only made it have added to its delight by giving it a wonderfully beautiful presentation in "Kentucky Days," is the other featured attraction.

R. E. KEITH'S THEATRE

Edith Clasper, one of the most appealing of youthful dancers, will give her splendid act of the R. E. Keith Theatre, this week, assisted by Paul O'Neal and Paul Yocan. This act is in the nature of a production, with special music and lyrics composed for it. Moore and Fred will also be present with their latest edition of "Mooning and Spooning" and it is pure novelty. Miss Peggy Fears and Harry Miller will offer their excellent dancing turn, and Westernhold, other acts for the week are San Traveline, a popular songstress, and Julius Furst, a European gymnast, and a veritable sensation. The picture feature will be "The Empty Cradle" with a wonderful cast, including the noted Harry Arney.

DISTRIBUTE BILLERICA TOWN REPORTS

BillERICA town reports for the past year are being distributed to the voters. They contain comprehensive facts and figures covering the work of all town executive committees and officials during the year 1923, and also have many recommendations to make to the voters, who are to assemble in annual town meeting next Saturday.

The finance committee makes a recommendation of a tax rate of $28 for 1924 and the selectmen also urge that a policy of retrenchment be adopted by the voters forthwith.

The assessors' report gives the town's total valuation as $7,389,583. A total number of 1140 residents and 2658 non-residents were assessed on property.

The tax collector's report shows the

INTERESTING ADDRESS

Rev. John W. Keyes, S. J.,
Addresses League of Catholic Women

"The Sterling-Read and Kindred bills" was the subject of a very interesting address by Rev. John W. Keyes, S. J., before the members and friends of the League of Catholic Women in Liberty hall, yesterday afternoon. The lecture was the first in a series of similar talks on cities, the speaker being introduced by the chairman of the cities committee, Miss Eva Blanchard.

"Do you know," spoke Fr. Keyes, "that in the last congress there were as many as 100 bills brought up which in one way or another would curtail the rights of the parents in this matter of education?"

"Is there anything nearer, dearer, closer to the home, than the education of the children?"

"When the proponents of this bill speak to an audience they will say, 'Is not education a thing of general welfare?' They appeal to the preamble to the Constitution, and it was with this appeal in view that Mr. Smith of Georgia proposed this bill. And in this bill he advocated nationalized education."

"That bill was defeated, and then Mr. Smith and Mr. Towner put their heads together, and said they must exclude the idea of federal control. And the Smith-Towner bill was proposed. Then it became the Towner-Read bill, and now it is the Sterling-Read bill."

It is exactly the same bill. The words are changed, but the spirit of the bill still remains. In case of difference of opinion between a state and the national secretary of education, the matter is to be reported to congress, and the appropriation is to be withheld from the state. Does not that speak of federal control? "Do you think the federal government is going to spend a hundred million dollars on the state without specifying how it is to be spent? That going to represent a democracy in his salaries will be raised. Will they? Ask those men who are in federal positions. The District of Columbia is governed in educational matters by congress. Are you aware that those teachers that are directly under federal control are getting less than the ordinary teacher of a town of 100,000 population?"

"What books are they going to put into the hands of the children? Today, in some histories, the battle ofunker-hill is made to appear like a myth, or like some misund-erstanding that we should forget."

"Education is to be in the hands of the government because it pertains to the general welfare. On that same argument, may I ask, is not religion conducive to the general welfare? May we not expect to have also a commissioner of religion?"

"Then we are told that the teacher-

WHERE WOODROW WILSON DIED

MRS. FRANCIS SAYRE MISS MARGARET WILSON MRS. WILLIAM McADOO

Physician and Financier
Friends and Confidants of
Wilson to the End

Bond Between Wilson and
Grayson Almost as a Feeling of Father and Son

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press) Many friends and confidants came into Woodrow Wilson's life after he entered the White House. Many also passed out. Of all those who came, two notably remained to his dying moment.

One was his physician, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson; the other was Bernard M. Baruch, the New York financier and counselor on the intricacies of the post war problems. Of the two, Mr. Wilson's relationship with Dr. Grayson was the more personal, the bond between them was almost as a feeling between father and son. Mr. Wilson's friendship for Mr. Baruch, although personal also was sustained on the foundation of two minds that ran along together in common cause.

Grayson was the confidant and friend of two presidents before Wilson, brought to his chief touches of nature which many declared were not part of Mr. Wilson's natural equipment. Nevertheless, it was a profound respect for those attributes which grew into close friendship and companionship.

Dr. Grayson was the son of a Virginia country doctor, orphaned early in life, who took his first knocks while getting an education. From his father and from experience he probably inherited the innately human conceptions of nature itself, as only the old style country doctor acquires them and these he brought to Woodrow Wilson.

The public mind most associates this physician, about whom it had heard so much, through the illness and death of Mr. Wilson. But long before Woodrow Wilson ever was heard of as a presidential possibility, Dr. Grayson was a naval officer attached to the staff of the president, and a physician to President Roosevelt. Because he knew something about human nature, birds, trees and animals, particularly horses, he was not long in becoming Colonel Roosevelt's aid and companion. There were other aides to be sure, but this young Virginia doctor, modest even to the point of being shy, spoke and listened with a keenness and intensity that were his own. His convictions and friendships were the one President Roosevelt picked out when he wanted a companion for some exciting horseback ride or something strenuous.

The American people were thrilled when President Roosevelt first took office, and they were not less so when he asked of no one something he himself would not do, made his famous 90 mile horseback ride from Washington to Warrenton, and back in a cold steady rain that froze as it fell. Nobody mentioned that Dr. Grayson rode every foot of the way at his chief's side, and sometimes guided the president's horse when his spectacles were coated with ice.

President Roosevelt turned Grayson over to President Taft, with a recommendation for loyalty and he won Mrs. Taft's heart with his sympathetic devotion to the delicate health.

Woodrow Wilson never heard of Cary T. Grayson when he stepped into the White House on March 4th, 1913, on that day came "a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

Several physicians of the army and navy, including Grayson, were attached to the White House. In Washington, Dr. Grayson's specialty and splendor, but all but one of them from the fixed post, Grayson elected to remain on duty. The first Mrs. Wilson, as she stepped through the White House portals in her first moments as first lady, met with an unimportant but painful accident. A call for a doctor was answered immediately by Grayson. Mrs. Wilson commended to her husband this modest young man, who seemed so devoted to duty. He became Mr. Wilson's aide and physician and as the years went on, his friend. No political wires were pulled; no influence flung in the disquisition in one of the most coveted posts in Washington.

A little more than a year later, one hot August afternoon with a world war bursting into flame, the first Mrs. Wilson lay on her death bed. Her last words to Grayson were "Take good care of Woodrow, please." How well that promise was kept probably only a recording angel may know now.

Some time after Mrs. Wilson's death, Dr. Grayson introduced to Miss Helen Woodrow Wilson, president Wilson's housewife and guest at the White House a friend of long acquaintance. Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, Miss Bolling took her into the small White House circle where Mrs. Wilson met her. The lady later became Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Some time after that Mr. Wilson on recommendation of Secretary Daniels of the navy department, nominated Grayson for promotion to the rank of rear admiral. The real truth of that matter was that in conversation with Mr. Daniels soon before her death, the first Mrs. Wilson asked the secretary of the navy to give to her husband's physician and aid, some rank commensurate with his responsibility, and to insure his attachment to the White House against any routine arrangement. Grayson never knew he had been nominated for promotion until he read it in the newspapers. There was opposition, somewhat like that which attended President Roosevelt's promotion of General Wood. It is so often the case that the man who is so often the most modest and unassuming, when he has an opportunity to become a member of the navy, he declines it.

Probably no one will ever know what the complexities and difficulties

SCENE AT WILSON HOME, WHEN DEATH WAS ANNOUNCED

Former President
Passed From Life

The federal government already has offered to do whatever is fitting to express the nation's reverence at the passing of a great leader. President Coolidge called yesterday at the house of bereavement, expressed his regret and his readiness to be helpful, and then issued a proclamation of 30 days official mourning. Over the White House and the government departments, on the nation's fighting ships at sea and over the outposts of American diplomacy in foreign lands, the Stars and Stripes were brought to half mast. Congress today recessed in respect for his memory and the whole machinery of the government, whose guiding genius he was for eight momentous years, will stand still on the day of his funeral.

The place of entombment has not been selected, but it is probable his body will be placed for a while in a Washington cemetery. There it will await the erection of a memorial to serve as his last resting place, and to perpetuate fittingly in stone the memory of those great days of crisis when the world hung upon his words.

Today the frayed remnant of his mortality lies in the chamber whose walls looked down yesterday upon the last scene of a career that had known all the heights and depths of human emotion. In death he appears as if in peaceful sleep, his features serene and composed and his square jaw set with the old determination. But the lines are somewhat deeper and heavier and the flashing fire of his eyes has gone out forever.

Although he had not known a well day since he crossed the threshold of the place of his retirement, for months before, last Friday saw the beginning of the end of his long illness. His collapse, during his western speaking trip in 1919, followed by a stroke of paralysis soon after his return to Washington, had made him almost an invalid long ago. Early last week, a slight digestive disorder further weakened his delicate vitality and on Friday his friend and physician, Dr. Grayson, found his condition growing hourly more serious.

At 9 o'clock he fell asleep and never awakened again. It was at 11:15 a. m. that life finally went out. From first to last he was without pain, and in his last waking moments he appeared to be resting in complete comfort. As the end approached, the little group watching in the sick room drew nearer about him. Mrs. Wilson sat on the bed beside him, with his almost lifeless hand in both of hers. Close by was his eldest daughter, Margaret Wilson; and Dr. Grayson, faithful in his ministrations since the first sign of illness more than four years ago, watched for some new way at least to help him as he crossed the bar.

But there was nothing to be done. More and more feebly became the pulse beat; there was a quickening of the breath; little by little death was completing its conquest. A quick flutter of the eyelids, a faint smile, almost like a smile across the wasted features, and the spirit of the great war president had hurled at last the long-weakening fetters that bound it to earth.

Thus, he who had dreamed a high dream of peace for all the world had found peace for himself and had left behind a world still tossed by strife and turmoil.

Thus, he against whom life had turned at last, after leading him through paths of greatest glory, found death gentle and even merciful. Thus, with the soft chiding of hyems flouting in on the Sabbath air was written the last letter of that imperishable chapter of human history, comprising the life of Woodrow Wilson.

Of his position as physician, friend and confidant of Woodrow Wilson really were. One thing is certain. He devoted seven years of his life to keep Woodrow Wilson a well man and four more to keeping him alive.

GOVERNOR COX EXPRESSES GRIEF

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—State officials yesterday were much grieved at the death of former President Wilson.

Governor Cox said: "For the second time within a year the whole nation is crushed by universal sorrow. A leader whose services to his country will take rank with the highest has fallen. President Wilson was called upon to carry the overwhelming burden of summoning the American people to enter the greatest of wars and to hold them steadfast in their purpose until it was won. He succeeded, and his mighty contribution to the salvation of civilization will be held in grateful remembrance. His matchless power of statement set the tremendous issues involved in such plain terms that all understood. The country is the better for the ideals to which he gave happy expression. His life in the service of the people who honored him living, and who will hold his memory in highest honor."

EX-PRES. WILSON'S NURSE

PARIS COMMENT ON WILSON'S DEATH

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Former President Wilson's death was featured prominently by this morning's newspapers, indeed almost to the exclusion of other topics. There are many pictures of the American war president and copious biographies. Most of the commentators adversely criticize his achievements, though the reasons given differ according to the political leanings of the writers.

Andre Tardieu in the Echo National, writes: "The people of France will not forget that, if Woodrow Wilson might have been mistaken in certain political aspects of the peace, he gave his whole mind, soul and will to the war. He felt fighting on the battlefield of peace for these ideals of collaboration to which the short-sighted egoists who put the world where it is now, have persisted in turning their backs."

"France after honoring him, became unjustly severe to him. When time shall have struck a just mean, our country will remember that this great associate in the war was deprived of office for having wished to have right against might."

L'Oeuvre says: "No man ever, after raising such high hopes, finally caused such deep disappointment."

PARIS, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press)—President Millerand today said Mrs. Wilson as follows:

"In the name of the French nation and in my own name, I associate myself with all my heart in the grief that has so cruelly come to you."

"My country will never forget the great president who played such an important part in the decision whereby the United States came to take her place beside France and her allies in the war of right against might."

"Humanity will cherish the memory of the generous thinker whose dearest wish was to assure forever the peace of the world."

Mayor Curley's Tribute

Mayor James M. Curley—"A martyr to liberty once wrote:

"Great men grow greater by the lapse of time. We know those least whom we have seen the latest."

And they, thought those whose names have grown sublime, the world will work for human liberty, are greatest."

"Posterity, fortified with facts and removed from the scene and events, will yet inscribe beside the names of Washington and Lincoln the name of that lover and champion of human liberty whose death represents a loss that is universal—Woodrow Wilson."

"His labors and sufferings are at an end. He has earned the right to rest. May he rest in peace."

Cong. Rogers' Tribute

Congressman Rogers—"During the entire period of the war, I served on the house committee on foreign affairs, and therefore had occasion to have frequent personal contact with President Wilson. I never failed to be conscious of his personal charm and magnetism and was invariably treated by him with the highest courtesy and consideration. To my mind the passing of Wilson is the passing of a man who will live large always in the history of his country. He lived in a time of stress and his habit of mind and viewpoint was such that he never shrunk from conflict or even strife if he saw his duty clearly. After the bitterness of the war period is over, after the main view of history has had an opportunity to exert itself, the world will more accurately appreciate his contribution to human thought."

Legion Commander's Tribute

MANHARTER, N. H., Feb. 4.—Before leaving here for Boston yesterday, National Commander John B. Quinn of the American Legion issued

PROCLAMATION BY GOV. COX

Directs That in Memory of
Wilson a 30-Day Period of Mourning Be Observed

Governor Also Sends Message of Sympathy to Mrs. Wilson

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—Governor Channing H. Cox in a proclamation issued today, directed that in memory of Woodrow Wilson, a 30 day period of mourning be observed.

"On behalf of the people of Massachusetts, let me express their feeling of sorrow in the death of Mr. Wilson. Massachusetts held him in honor while living and will cherish his memory. You have the deepest sympathy of our people."

(Signed)

"CHANNING H. COX,

"Governor of Massachusetts"

The proclamation read as follows: "With profound sorrow, the people of our commonwealth have learned of the death of Woodrow Wilson. The leader who carried the heavy burden of the national government during eight years of our darkest trial has ended his earthly labors."

"This was the mighty responsibility of summoning the American people to enter the greatest of wars, and to hold them steadfast to their purpose to the end of the war. His contribution to the preservation of civilization will be held in the most grateful remembrance. The country is the better for the ideals to which he gave expression. His life in the service of the people who honored him living, and who are crushed with universal grief to his death."

"In token of the love and reverence which our people have for him, I direct that the national and state flags be flown at half staff for a period of 30 days, and I urge that in schools and churches his loss be marked with proper ceremonies."

Given in the executive chambers in February, etc., etc., CHANNING H. COX, Governor of Massachusetts.

Tributes From Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 4.—All the Chilean newspapers devote many columns to the death of Woodrow Wilson and comment extensively upon his life and achievements. The general trend of the comment is that Latin-America will never cease to treasure his memory as a great man who embodied the best ideals of the most progressive people in the world.

Former Premier Orlando, declared to be respectful of Woodrow Wilson's attitude respecting Italy's claims at the peace conference, declined to make public a statement on his death.

The following statement on the death of Woodrow Wilson:

"I believe that Woodrow Wilson died in the line of duty as surely as if his fearless breast had been pierced by a bullet in the fields of France. He has gone to join the thousands of our young men who went forth to die and die that his life might prevail, world for democracy."

"The world may well recall that God Almighty has seen fit to take this great idealist when it so sorely needs a commander."

Mr. Quinn said that he was going to initiate a movement to have President Wilson buried in Arlington cemetery as one of the greatest war heroes. He said he would cancel his speaking tour and go to Washington to confer with past national commanders and with past members of the legion with a view to forming a committee "to do honor to our former great leader."

MAYOR DONOVAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO WILSON

Word of Woodrow Wilson's death reached Lowell by telegraph and radio shortly after official announcement had been made in Washington. Mayor John J. Donovan immediately ordered flags on all public buildings half-staffed and through his secretary arranged for the tolling of bells on the fire alarm system. The national salute of 21 strokes was used.

In connection with the former president's passing, the mayor paid the following tribute:

"A notable figure in world's history has passed to his reward. No one will deny the unsurpassed statesmanship and brilliant mentality of Woodrow Wilson. He guided our nation through dark and ominous days of warfare with masterly prudence and sound judgment."

"His subsequent policies of administration naturally invoked division of opinion. Right or wrong, he sacrificed his life for the ideals of America's responsibilities in world affairs might have been questioned. Woodrow Wilson's priceless gems of thought as expressed in state papers will prove a guidance for posterity in the shaping of national destinies. Yes, and posterity will undoubtedly place a more just estimate of Mr. Wilson and his service to humanity than has been awarded him in his day and generation."

(Signed)

JOHN J. DONOVAN,

Mayor.

WILSON GREAT MAN, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

CHURCH, Surrey, England, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press)—At his new country home here, high up in the Surrey hills, where the fresh breezes have added further color to his usual healthful glow, David Lloyd George, Great Britain's war prime minister, yesterday heard from the correspondent of the Associated Press the news of the peaceful passing of Woodrow Wilson.

"Woodrow Wilson will become one of the great figures of history," was Mr. Lloyd George's tribute to the man who shortly before had passed away in Washington.

"He was a man," Mr. Lloyd George added, "and therefore had his weaknesses, but he was the first to embody the ideal of fraternity of nations into a concrete plan."

"Take the founder of Christianity, the central figure in history, and like Lincoln after him he presented his ideal to his race. These circumstances, if nothing more, would make his memory last in the minds of men."

"Wilson, like Lincoln and other great idealists, has not lived to see his dream realized. Nevertheless his work will be carried on to his own glory and the permanent benefit of mankind. In the national sense he has his country and onto the road of world affairs, from which there is no turning back."

WILSON CRUCIFIED BY POLITICIANS

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 4.—John W. Westcott, of this city, who twice nominated Woodrow Wilson for the democratic presidential nomination, paid tribute to his dead friend today.

"Woodrow Wilson was the most intensely moral man I have ever known," he said.

"As the Nazarene was misunderstood, so Woodrow Wilson has been misunderstood and crucified by politicians. But as Christ is more potent today in human affairs than ever, so the commanding and practical morality of this remarkable man will ever grow, spread and ultimately come to the actual relationship between nations and between individuals."

After a stroke and paralysis are officially ascribed as the causes of former President Wilson's death.

TWO COMBINATIONS OF COLLARS AND CUFFS AND (ABOVE) SKETCHES OF THREE OTHER DESIGNS

BY MARIAN HALE
N.E.A. Service Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—One of the most effective ways to inject a little new life and pep into the blue serge or black crepe dress, that has done service since last fall, is to invest in some smart collars and cuffs.

These offer a pleasant compromise between one's inclinations for spring clothes and the necessity for winter wear.

They also create that impression of femininity which works such wonders with the masculine sex.

Some of the newest collars are arranged on net blousé foundations so that the inconvenience of fastening it to the frock is obviated. Smart collars for the round neckline come close about the neck and do not need to be fastened to the frock, as the neckline of the frock is entirely covered by the collar.

There are detachable punts or ruffles that may be fastened inside the short sleeve to make it practically any length. And there are wide turn-back cuffs that make any stout coat desirable between the wrist and the elbow.

White crepe de chine or satin models are frequently made quite plain with only planting, buttons or hem-stitching for trimming. These of net or batiste are frequently embellished with one or many kinds of lace and tucks, ruffles, plaiting or what not.

With the flannel or jersey frock, sets of white or even linen, with a variation of the Peter Pan collar and wide, rather close cuffs, are popular. These are undoubtedly the most youthful accessories in which any woman may invest.

Besides collars and cuffs of white are many others of delicate or brilliant—hand-hood, organdie, striped, or hand-embroidered—thus giving a little new service before they go to the laundry and also add the touch of color so much in vogue now.

TRENCH WARFARE IN MEXICAN FUSS

World War veterans would be lost if they looked for firing steps, parapets, and duckboards here but this is trench warfare in old Mexico. The picture taken on the federal front shows Obregon troops resting behind improvised shelters, after a long advance against the revolutionists.

ROSTON, Feb. 4. Milton A. Bloom, Chicago lawyer, formerly of Boston, and Clyde Gold of New York, were arrested today at Roston, and taken into custody on the sum of $1000 each by Judge Morton in the federal court today. The men some time ago pleaded a habeas corpus to individuals for using the mails to defraud in connection with the reorganization of the bankrupt Maine Fisheries Corporation into a company to be known as the North Star Fish Corporation. They have already made some contribution.

Judge Morton, in communicating an arrest warrant out to the defendants, said that they had threatened to kill him and that it was not unreasonable to circulate insinuations of statements regarding the property of a corporation in order to raise money.

Edward H. Erdmann, of Bath, Me., senior county attorney, and Judge Lane of Bath, were arrested with Bloom and Gold but were not indicted.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 4. While company and city authorities were busy today they do not forget they were being followed by the curiosity of a local number of Moses Goldberg, 67, popular Concord shoemaker, merchant today they admitted that several Concord men had been examined during their investigations and that some remained to be eliminated. Goldberg was beaten to death and probably robbed Saturday night.

At the same time headquarters received that three letters, signed by the K. Klux Klan had been received on the second day of the investigation by Mr. Milton Patrick, the second to Amos H. Hubbard and the third to Mrs. Goldberg. "The first two said, 'Jew is eliminated. We'll get more.' The letter received by Mrs. Goldberg said 'We got your husband. Look out.' All were in the same handwriting.

Mrs. Goldberg's funeral services were held today, with burial in Manchester.

It is doubtful, according to Postmaster Belisle, a last year's record will be equaled within the next few years as the removal of the office of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company from this city means the loss of a rate of approximately $1000 a year.

From the standpoint of efficiency 1923 was also a record breaking year, according to the postmaster. The main office was enlarged by the addition of an extra floor over the main section, permitting the removal of carriers distributing desks from the main floor and adding seats to the space for the first class and parcel post matter.

The opening of the Central Post Station also assisted greatly in relieving congestion at the main station as all carriers for Centralville and Branch have their headquarters there. At the present time this station is not running on a part time basis, so far as carriers are concerned but it is expected that this will be changed.

This Little World

CHICAGO

BY GEORGE BRITT
N. E. A. Service Writer

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—What's the matter with the men in this town? You may ask if you spend 10 minutes waiting under the canopy of a downtown movie castle.

The youth who takes his girl to the movies isn't as faithful as he used to be. He lets her go alone.

At least two-thirds of the arrivals are women, coming by twos and threes. Thirty or forty girls in the course of 10 minutes are driven up alone in taxicabs.

Hardbaked terra cotta has blossomed as an oasis for the gladdening of a young couple in a fashionable honeymoon apartment.

Their dining room window faced a vista of barren, grimy wall, a depressing sight.

"Nothing easier," said the sign painter to whom they appealed. And he laid on a garden, 10 feet wide, a marvelous pattern of hollyhocks and chrysanthemums, orchids and edelweiss, bordered by a strip of evergreen grass.

Here's a story of the city streets which can be localized anywhere.

A woman who parked her car in front of a Main street drygoods emporium found a police tag on it when she came out. She paid her fine but kept the tag.

The next time she parked in the same forbidden territory and put the tag back on the car. Policemen observed that the traffic violation was properly attended to and left it alone. The woman played the game the next day and the next, still apparently a success.

Dogs are the worst toppers of all animals, not excepting the horses who used to drink beer while waiting for their drivers at the saloon door. This is the discovery of Dr. Bert Franklin, Chicago veterinarian.

"A dog will come back for more whenever you hold out the spoon, whether it's straight whiskey or mixed with cod liver oil," says Dr. Franklin. "But cats make just as much of a fuss the twentieth time they take it as the first."

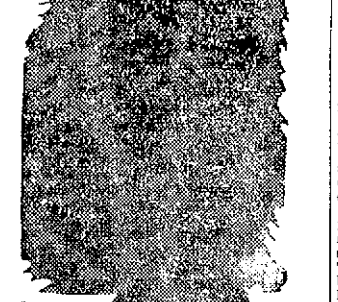

"Wasn't there a minute ago," said the lady. "I don't know," replied North Wind. "That's all I blow it open. And after we get inside, you will be out of the wind." So Jack entered. (Continued.)

ANNIVERSARY WEEK LOWELL DISTRICT COURT

Lowell Council of Boy Scouts
to Hold Big Public Meeting
Friday Night

Beginning next Friday evening, February 5, Lowell council, Boy Scouts of America, will join in the national observance of Boy Scout anniversary week, which will extend through Thursday, the 11th. This year marks the 14th anniversary of the incorporation of the organization and Lowell council, with its 21 troops and 525 members is planning to enter heartily into the observance.

President

become honorary members of Lowell council and will be presented pins of their rank by delegates from all of the local troops.

Edwin J. McLean, Lowell Scout executive, is in charge of the anniversary week plans and has arranged a most attractive and interesting program. The speakers at the Friday night meeting will include Mayor John J. Donohue, Hugh J. McElroy, superintendent of schools, and Dr. John H. Lambert, president of Lowell council. It is expected that upwards of 400 scouts, representing the 21 local troops will be present at the meeting, all in approved Scout uniform. The meeting will be public and all interested are urged to attend.

At 8.15 o'clock, in common with similar meetings being held all over the country, Lowell scouts will stand and renew their scouting obligations, which in brief are:

- To do my duty to God and country and obey the Scout Law;
- To help other people at all times;
- To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

This is the same pledge or obligation to be taken by the public officials and others who are to become honorary members of the organization.

As a special feature of anniversary week, each scout council in the country will conduct a patriotic pilgrimage to the home, birthplace or burial place of some one of the presidents of the United States, or of some American citizen whose name has found a place in the Hall of Fame.

The Lowell council on Saturday will send a delegation of scouts representing each of the local troops, to the burial place of Franklin Pierce, 14th president of the United States, in Concord, N. H. Troops of nearby towns also will join in the pilgrimage and the trip will be made by motor.

Next Monday, the 8th, will be observed in the public schools as Scout day and arrangements are being made for brief exercises. At the high school all boys will be brought together in the gymnasium, where the exercises will be in class rooms.

BY TAKING FATHER
JOHN'S MEDICINE

"My three children as well as myself have taken Father John's Medicine, and we know its value for those who are thin and run down as well as for colds and coughs. I am sure that it has saved me a good deal of expense." (Signed) William Frank, Orono, Maine.

Because of its pure food contents Father John's Medicine builds health and new flesh. It is pure, wholesome food—just what those who are thin and run down need for body building.

Judge Enright Had Big Monday Morning Docket to Dispose of Today

A brand new alibi for drunkenness sprung in district court this morning won a five months' sentence for Joseph Baron, who was arrested by Officer McLean Saturday night. The bright cloth in the hall where he worked is too much for him, Baron said, and so took some moonshine as a counter-irritant.

"You'll find dark cloth at the house of correction," was the ominous warning of Judge Enright who was moved to compassion by the pitiful tale of the man's wife. She first exploded his "bright cloth" alibi by saying he hadn't turned a hand to work for six months. Then she told a touching tale of want and privation and their little child in the hospital. Even the husband seemed brought to a deeper realization of his duties and on his promise to quit drinking and get his name on a payroll somewhere he was turned over to the probation officer for a year. Sentence of five months was suspended.

The drunkenness of a dreary morning was never more pronounced in the gray courtroom. Every case seemed to bring out the seamy side of life and emphasize the phase of police work that doesn't come to mind when you see one of the finest swinging jauntily along on his beat.

Karolina Galen, alias Nestek, and Frank Stys were arraigned on statutory charges. "A and state of affairs" said the court after listening to one of the woman's three children say the defendant had "bought me clothes for a year and is very good to me." The defendants were held in $300 surety each until Saturday morning. In the meantime the police and the probation officer will collaborate in an investigation of all phases of the case.

A mother and son, Julia and Joseph Perrin, were charged with illegal liquor sale and keeping, respectively. A continuance of ten days was granted. Officers Moore, Leach, Ingles, McElroy, Conney and Mahoney raided their home in a Fayette street tenement Saturday night, finding twelve gallons of some sort of liquid, 140 empty bottles and two jugs. The mother is alleged to have resisted the intrusion of the officers after an informant is said to have made a purchase from her.

George Morel, for whom justice has been waiting since his place in Cheever street was raided some time ago, was arrested Sunday and upon arraignment today was granted a continuance until Friday morning.

James O'Neil was fined $15 and Victor Carrier and Peter Lynch $10 each, being found guilty of drunkenness. John B. Clark, charged with drunkenness, will be arraigned Thursday.

Paul J. Roane has been added to the clerical force of the purchasing agent's department and began his duties today.

A telephone alarm at 9.20 this morning called fire apparatus to 72 Andrews street where a chimney fire caused but little damage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Collins of 160 Merrimack street have left for a two months' pleasure cruise to the West Indies.

As a token of appreciation for volunteer services rendered in connection with the recent successful prosecution of the Knights of Columbus musical comedy, "Let's Go," the orchestra, principals and chorus will be tendered a testimonial banquet and dinner in the council rooms next Wednesday evening.

Those Maury's boys, embracing Herb Webster and wife, will be at the Empire theatre, Lawrence, the last half of the current week. John Young of this city, formerly of the Lawrence Bag Pipe band, is one of the party. This act claims Lowell as its home town and hopes to play here later in the season.

The many friends and friends of Miss Little thank the well known teacher for her kind and thoughtful letter of appreciation with a studio at her home on upper Gorham street, which she has planned to know that she is recuperating at the Lowell Corporation hospital after a serious operation which was performed last week. Miss Little is well on the road to a speedy recovery and will be pleased to meet her pupils and friends who care to come to the hospital to visit her the latter part of the week.

The condition of the man James H. Tracy, who was injured early last week when he fell from the hose wagon while responding to an alarm, is reported today at St. John's hospital as considerably improved. Considerable improvement is also noted in the condition of John C. Phil, auto accident victim, at the same hospital.

Lowell council, 21 troops, all in the city except four which are in Braintree, Chelmsford, Haverhill and Tyngsboro. The total membership is about 525. Five more troops now are in the process of formation, three in Lowell and two in Braintree. A troop at Braintree has also made inquiries relative to affiliation with Lowell council.

This year's secondary program will find membership secondary to training, although it is expected natural growth will occur. Intensive training schedules have been drawn up by Executive Allen and these will be given preference over membership drives.

INTO HISTORY

Once more we weave a wreath for one of our dead great. Woodrow Wilson has passed. He had touched the spark that makes men live. They bury a corpse within a plot of ground, but they cannot bury a tradition. There will be a Wilson tradition! Some men live in their day and some grow great in perspective. Woodrow Wilson lived in a world beyond his day, and now he will live in a day beyond his death. He started a dream garden of world democracy and peace. He saw it produce weeds of ridicule in some spots and, in others, blades of growing hope. He died for his dream. He broke his body in the fight to spread this gospel. And in nearing the end, he said: "I am a piece of machinery—broken!" Wrinkled had grown the hand that firmly held the war-time helm—wrinkled and paralyzed. The machine was wrecked. But it had done its work.

We mourn him today—though Woodrow Wilson's name will live on. Generations yet unborn will write his name large. In his life he came to know well the taste of wormwood. So did Lincoln. He wanted love—the love of his people. In a moment of despair, he cried out to a friend: "I want people to love me, but I suppose they never will." He wanted to be thought human. Yet he saw himself termed an "intellectual machine" and a "maker of lovely phrases," whereupon he turned, almost in tears and asked: "Great God, am I not more than that?" Yes, he was more than that. The muse of history will do full justice to the ideals and achievements and even to the unattained ambitions of Woodrow Wilson.

CHISHOLM-RYAN CASE EGYPTIAN SARCOPHAGUS

BEFORE MASTER

The hearing before Frederic S. Harvey as master in the disagreement between Finlay Chisholm and Albert J. Ryan continued this morning at the Gorham street courthouse. The litigation is the outcome of a dispute in connection with the building of two houses for Mr. Chisholm at Westford and Walker streets by Mr. Ryan as architect.

Early Morning Automobile Accident

His right eye, he showed little evidence of having been in the accident. His escape, since he is alleged to have been at the driver's wheel, is regarded as miraculous.

According to his story of the accident to the police yesterday, he long said he has a room on Kirk street and slept there Saturday night. Awakening about 3 o'clock in the morning he decided to go to the home of his relatives in Chelmsford Centre. He got his machine and started home, picking up the three other passengers at various points to take them to their homes.

At a point near Foster street on Westford the snow had gathered on his windshield sufficiently to interfere with clear vision and he reached forward to clear the wind-shield wiper and clear off the snow, at the same time applying the service brake. As he did so the car lurched from the car tracks and skidded in a semicircle, the rear end striking a tree. The car continued to plunge forward and came to a stop after striking a electric light pole.

The impact caused DeLong to lose consciousness. When he regained his senses he saw Graham and McFarland lying on the car tracks on Westford street and Burkshaw in the machine with him, bleeding from cuts about the face.

Officer McDonald, Mr. Harold L. Leonard and Dr. Marshall L. Allen heard the crash and hurried to the scene. The ambulance and police patrol were summoned and the two seriously injured men rushed to St. John's hospital. The driver of the machine and Burkshaw were treated by the two doctors, Burkshaw then being sent to his home and DeLong placed under arrest.

The automobile was completely demolished as a result of the smash. The body of the car was torn from the frame, the top collapsed, and the running gear was twisted out of shape. So severe was the impact that even the seat cushions were broken.

Tut Exposed for First Time in 3200 Years

LEONOR, Egypt, Feb. 4.—(By the Associated Press) For the first time in 3200 years the great stone coffin of Tut-Ankh-Amen stood forth today in all its majestic splendor of its protective nest of golden shrouds.

The fourth cabinet proved in Howard Carter's experienced hands, a less formidable problem than was first surmised, and a new hour work yesterday sufficed to disengage the sarcophagus. Then it was seen that the enthusiasm evoked by the glimpse obtained four weeks ago of one end of the sarcophagus through the opening doors of the enclosing shrine, was justified.

As massive in construction as it is, the coffin is simple in design and as unadorned by the tooth of time as it is inviolate from the hands of tomb robbers. This priceless stone chest, gleaming black beneath the glare of the electric lamps, must be considered a unique specimen of the funerary art of the 18th dynasty.

The four crowned goddesses of death, who, in traditional posture, stand at the four corners of the coffin with wings outspread to shield the dead monarch from the forces of evil, are boldly and deeply incised—full-breasted, with slender arms and powerfully winged, each with one hand grasping the "ankh" or key of life, which figures in the dead Pharaoh's name. The lid is massively solid and inscribed in hieroglyphs with lines of hieroglyphs.

The sarcophagus has thought to be even larger than the massive coffin of Haremhab in an adjoining tomb, which itself is a fine specimen of 18th dynasty sculpture, roughly six feet high, five broad and seven long.

It was an emotional moment for the excavators when they first gazed upon this royal casket, hewn by mortals bidden, Mass.

JOSEPH H. RIDINGS NAMED BY DYERS

Joseph H. Ridings of the Bay State mills was elected vice president of the National Association of Textile Dyers and Finishers at a meeting Saturday in the Billman hotel, Providence.

Samuel Scott of Lawrence was named a member of the executive committee. The association was formed by the merger of Textile Dyers, James J. Burns, of Washington, D. C., was elected president, and Frederick Babcock of Cambridge, will be the executive secretary for the coming year. The first move of the association will be to open an employment agency, at the office of Secretary Babcock, 185 Main street, Cambridge.

Active in Court Work Over

Edward W. Trull, clerk of the Lowell district court, will complete his five-year term of office on Feb. 23 next. When President Calvin Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts, he appointed Mr. Trull as clerk of court to succeed James F. Savage, who severed his connections with the court on Feb. 22, 1919, under the retirement laws. Clerk Trull's appointment took effect on Feb. 23 at midnight. He has served efficiently since that time, and this morning received a wire from the state house that he will be reappointed at the expiration of his present term.

Clerk Trull has been actively identified with local court circles since July 19, 1888, when he entered the office as assistant to Clerk Savage. He was made assistant clerk in Jan. 1889. At

CITY WELCOMES SNOW POL

Hope to Make Winter Carnival Possible on Wednesday and Thursday

Just when all but the last faint spark of hope had been abandoned, the weather man heeded the wishes of Lowell's winter carnival committee and the Sabbath morn found the streets well covered with snow, and a strong flurry in progress. Not enough snow fell during the day to make the carnival a hurry, yet hopes were re-born and the enthusiastic carnival boosters, who plan to start their stunts Wednesday, rejoiced when again this morning they found the sidewalks loosened more snow and promised to do a generous job.

Saturday, with the carnival but four days away, things looked pretty blue and it seemed almost certain that the carnival would meet with postponed success. The program for the two day carnival, which ends with the knicker ball at the Auditorium Thursday night and the selection of a king and queen is complete in every detail. There will be horse races, a football game in the snow, skiing events, skating races and everything that makes up an A-1 card.

One of the big features of the carnival will be the exhibition here of Walden's All-American dog team which will come down from Woodbury, N. H., for the carnival. Chinook, magnificent lead dog of the Walden team, will head the group of huskies. Chinook was leader of the team which won the international dog sled derby in 1922 and comes from a strain of fast and powerful dogs.

Just snow and a bit more winterish look to the air is all that is needed to make the carnival possible. If success is certain if weather conditions will only favor it.

MATRIMONIAL

Mr. Francis Dzirkiewicz of Chicago, Ill., and Miss Mary E. Stankiewicz of Haverhill, were married yesterday afternoon by Rev. J. F. Lesiak, pastor of the Polish National Catholic church in Lakeside avenue. The bridegroom was attended by the Messrs. Janina Dzirkiewicz and Josephine Stankiewicz as bridesmaids and Messrs. John Stankiewicz and Anthony Dzirkiewicz as best men. The bride wore a gown of white satin and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 123 Rungway road, Haverhill. The couple left on an extended wedding trip to Chicago and upon their return will live in this city.
